Thread: To the moon & back.

dye. - April 23, 2015, 6:36 am

Someone asked for a random concept with "I love you to the moon and back", here's what I done, keep in mind I'm new to illustrator and a beginner.

I like the design, only bad thing I can see is that the font on the bottom could be a little better and suitable, and add the after to, apart from that good job.

The only thing I do not like about the design is that the type you used goes from a clean type to a handwritten type. It's just a minor inconsistency. I know that designs like these vary in type, but when varying type, I suggest sticking to the same family of type.

Regardless, it is clean and visually appealing.

P.S. You forgot "the" in the design.

I wasn't meant to add "the" into the design, as they said they didn't want it because it's obvious what it means, thanks!

No because it takes up the space and looks better with text.

Very good.

Did you add this to deviantart.com?

Because, you definitely should :)

This is exactly what it says... "I love you TO moon and back." Where is the "the"?

If you actually read the comments in this thread instead of being arrogant, then you would know, sadly you don't have the common sense.

comment wasn't even arrogant.. your comment is. You're being arrogant and defensive over the denial of the fact that the layout of the type is sloppy, unsatisfying and unfinished.

If you listened to constructive criticism or kindly objected to change, you'd get somewhere. When another designer recommends something to you, don't get your panties in a bunch and either take a moment to implement change to see whether or not you actually like it, or kindly reply that you are not interested and that you are happy with your design.

It's as simple as that. It baffles me that so many users simply cannot mentally comprehend this matter.

How's it "sloppy"? How's it "unfinished"? how's it "unsatisfying"?

Write me an essay.

Woah, woah, woah... Guys... Chill out... I was just trying to point something out. I didn't mean to be arrogant and I apologize if I was.? No need to argue though...?

EDIT: I noticed your comment and it clearly pointed out why there wasn't a "the". Again, I apologize for this... ?

iHaZeMoDzZ - April 29, 2015, 3:01 pm

Looks cool i give it a 8/10 it could add a bit more background

koekje333 - May 1, 2015, 11:03 am

Damn that looks amazing.

Great work man.

10/10

Suspense - May 1, 2015, 11:13 am

10/10 for this design. Very creative and the colours and fonts work perfectly.
