Thread: [Blackmailed by StacksAMillionaire \[UID= 1862873\]](#)

BlackRockShooter - April 28, 2015, 4:42 am

I'm not sure if this is the right section, but since it started with his lessons he's selling on here, I guess it'll be fine.

Stacks profile: <https://hackforums.net/member.php?action=profile&uid=1862873>

Stacks lessons thread: <https://hackforums.net/showthread.php?tid=4517509>

I'll use spoilers so it won't get too big at once because nobody likes that.

What I did/How I met stacks:

Spoiler (Click to View)

So I found his thread, and I was very interested in a 250$ lesson. 250$ is very much for me, especially for one hour, but it looked very promising. At the end of the thread there were three guys who claimed to never got anything after payment. Stacks ignored these but he was still answering to vouches after those posts, so I asked this on the thread:

Quote:Why are you ignoring these posts but keep answering to vouches?

I am very interested but please clear those posts up for us first.

Which is, in my opinion, just a friendly question. And I also stated that I am very interested so this is, again in my opinion, no sales trashing to me.

How he reacted:

Spoiler (Click to View)

He ignored my post, but left this rep on me:

I have absolutly no idea why I am horrible or not trustworthy just because of my post. If this is sales trashing for him he could have just send me a PM then I'd have removed the post, I wasn't meant to be rude in any way, I just think it's okay to ask that if you're going to spend 250$ for a one hour lesson on someone.

What happend then:

Spoiler (Click to View)

So I have sent him a PM, and explained everything to him. He started to act friendly, and he said that he just over-reacted, and that he's sorry for it, and that he'll change it to a +3. I said I'll remove my post completly, and so did I. Everything was fine and after 24h he changed the rep to a +3. Yay. A few hours after that he send me a PM with the title: "I'm going to -3 you again..." and the following content:

StacksAMillionaire Wrote:I'm going to -3 you again if you don't +1 me or buy the class because why did I change it otherwise? ?

So I had a quick look at the Help Docs and found that blackmailing for rep is against the rules. I have also found out that stacks is doing this on a lot of people since 2013! Here's an example:

He also blackmailed this guy.

Here's another interesting post:

<https://hackforums.net/showthread.php?tid=4707297&pid=45815708#pid45815708>

What I did then:

Spoiler (Click to View)

I have contacted two staffs about this because I wasn't sure who's the right one. So far only one replied telling me that the other one will handle it, but he assured me that they will take this very serious.

I'd like to hear your opinions on that guy.

Cammy - April 28, 2015, 4:47 am

You should add screenshot proof that he said he will -3 you again if you don't give him positive reputation because that quote can easily be edited.

If you would've checked his reputation you could've seen other users also had a negative experience with him.

OP is right. Stacks negged me saying I'm "untrustworthy", when he's never done a deal with me a day in his life. All because I called him out for running with people's money.

$250 is a lot of fucking money to regular people, so his service should be right on and on time. For a person to just ignore a user for weeks and months at time and making excuses along the way is unacceptable imo.

This isn't a deal dispute, there was no deal, therefore there can be not dispute.

Report the reputation issue too staff, and make a community alert if you feel that way inclined.

This isn't valid however.

See what I wrote in the first line of OP. I said there is no deal, this is more a community alert. But I thought it's better to post it here, because users usually search for a UID of a member in the deal dispute section.
