Thank you for reading and hopefully you have visited the site. I know I'm using free hosting a free domain. I just want to see if I can drive some traffic and see if we can get some dedicated members

There are a ton of gaming forums. You have no original content and nothing that really stands out.

First of all, get a real domain if you want to make this big. Also like @dirheist said, there are countless gaming forums, yours is nothing special and it's gonna get buried like all the others. If you want a forum so bad, go think of an original idea and get an actual domain + hosting. Not some free shit. You will never achieve anything this way (except for spam bots). I would suggest looking into starting your own game server, and build a forum through that. It will take long time and effort, but it will pay off in the end.

I agree with most of which OP stated above.

Your site can do with some SEO improvements also, it lacks the basic fundamentals.

Have you signed up to analytics and webmaster tools also?

Looks lame and shit nothing I'd ever sign up to. Boring and loads of people have forums like these. The domain, YUCK.

Agree with OP, you need to differentiate yourself.
So many forums about nowa days..
