Thread: Trust Scan Released

Omniscient - May 7, 2015, 9:16 pm

I'm officially removing it from Beta status.

Original beta thread: <https://hackforums.net/showthread.php?tid=4777942>

The feature is linked in profile page next to their reputation.

Trust Scan is available to all Ub3r and 3P1C members as well.

The link is listed on the Extras page.

Enjoy everyone.

Fr?sh - May 7, 2015, 9:17 pm

I'm going to upgrade to 3p1c now that it is available for them

NoodleBot™ - May 7, 2015, 9:17 pm

Good update, good to see this coming out of BETA and into action.

brian188246 - May 7, 2015, 9:17 pm

Was about to make a thread calling you sneaky for adding the button and not making a thread about it.

You need some butter you're on a roll

i miss you on xmpp </3

Prince™ - May 7, 2015, 9:17 pm

Was just wondering why am I able to see for other users as well. And then, I see your thread and that makes sense. X)

Ahri????? - May 7, 2015, 9:18 pm

Very good feature to use when dealing with members, glad to see more will have access to it.

Pharcyde - May 7, 2015, 9:18 pm

Awesome! This and 2-Factor Authenticaon are some of the best features you've released so far.

ViN - May 7, 2015, 9:20 pm

Just saw the link on my profile page, really happy about this; one hell of a feature.

Roger Waters - May 7, 2015, 9:24 pm

It's about time it got to the Extras page. Been using this feature a lot lately. Thanks for implementing this.

IP Lookup - May 7, 2015, 9:25 pm

Can't wait till I'm Ub3r to try this thing out. Sounds pretty cool from what I've heard from others.

Charlemagne - May 7, 2015, 9:28 pm

Will we be able to see the UUIDs of the users that match the IP of that person in the future?

Mr. WAVES - May 7, 2015, 9:28 pm

Useful, much easier to search for someone.

Katana - May 7, 2015, 9:29 pm

Sweet, glad that this is open. Looking forward to upgrade.

Illuminati? - May 7, 2015, 9:31 pm

I had it bookmarked for some time.

I really enjoy it.

One thing I'd like to know is (If you look at my latest thread) how come some nonactivated members have 2,000+ matching IPs with other members?

Is it because they're using some kind of VPN or proxies? It's hard to believe someone has 2,000+ accounts.

JDCL - May 7, 2015, 9:33 pm

Jesus. Did you even sleep in the past 48 hours? Nice release. Lmfao. You zombie.

Omniscient - May 7, 2015, 9:36 pm

Quote:Will we be able to see the UUIDs of the users that match the IP of that person in the future?

No. I will not allow that. That goes beyond statistical data.

Quote:Jesus. Did you even sleep in the past 48 hours?

Almost 3 hours. Plus I painted a room in my house, did dishes (twice), and took my kid to the hospital. Oh I also worked out (boxing/mma training) twice.

Also dealt with a huge DDOS attack and changed the HF serving.

I must say...I need a drink.

IP Lookup - May 7, 2015, 9:37 pm

Well, people are already abusing this and whoring it out for free rep...I knew it wouldn't last long.

Really fantastic feature, makes dealing in the marketplace much more secure. I think it would be cool if you could generate some type of number value that determined somebody's "trust level". I'm not sure how it would need to be done, just an idea. This is definitely something that should be added in the postbit one way or another.

"trust" would be fairly forgiving to unique IP's considering that doesn't play much of a role in how safe it is to deal with that member, especially in this new age of internet enabled devices. I'd assume major factors would be scam reports, multiple accounts, multiple regions, email changes, ect. A rep ratio would also be a cool value to throw into the equation, and account age.

I'm not saying it would have to play a direct role. Age could be used to reduce volatility of your value. Or not, just thinking out loud. :P In order to make an equation that's hard to guess you really have to throw in a lot of factors. Even if they are fairly minute.

Not going to lie, nor complain but I am not happy with the last password change feature, I'd prefer if you could disable stuff in your trust scan or something having a last password change feature kind of makes me feel insecure about the fact someone could technically compromise my account knowing the information that I've never changed my password. Why not just change your password to something more secure? Password change is pretty important when figuring out if somebody is hacked.

(May 11, 2015 03:12 PM)Omniscient Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) Please explain how knowing when you last changed your password compromises your account. I'd like for you to explain that.

If there was some leaked DB with passwords and his alias (which is highly unlikely) there's a slight chance passwords match, but then again you'd have to be retarded to say the least to use the same passwords on 2 forum sites, no matter if it relates to HF or not. It's like asking to be compromised by using the same alias and even letting people know that you use other forums too. That's like the only possible outcome imo.

Actually I'd be more cautious dealing with someone who never changed password than someone who changed it today, probably because if you're here for 2-3 years and you never changed password in 90% cases you don't really give a fuck about your security, the other 10% is probably because you have some high-tech password.

Omniscient - May 11, 2015, 3:50 pm

Quote: If there was some leaked DB with passwords and his alias
Then the leaked DB was the cause of the compromise not this data.

Quote: probably because if you're here for 2-3 years and you never changed password in 90% cases you don't really give a fuck about your security
Probably when I last changed my HF password. I don't change my password just to change my password. Even my most highly required secured site I don't constantly change my PW.

A recent password change is definitely one of the things done on sold or stolen accounts.

Cryptic™ - May 11, 2015, 3:51 pm

Would be nice if users were required to activate 2FA to post threads in the market place, or at least certain sections of the MKT place.

I see currency exchangers that exchange thousands on a weekly basis with 2FA disabled on their account....

Would help cut down on a lot of "I was hacked" bs.

You are obviously using it incorrectly and you're not even reporting back very well.

If testing it failed there is a link to reset the code. You would see it as well as an "Invalid Code" message.

Whatever you're doing you are doing it wrong. Do you use 2FA for anything else?

You didn't actually activate it. And while you might be entering the code during the login the fact is that you don't need to.

Reset your code and actually activate it properly.

I was just assuming what the message was, I basically just explained my experience, I'm on my computer now and I can check again and report what happens, I only use 2FA for my BTC wallet and my google accounts.

My phone's clock was manually inserted, once I changed it to automatic with time zone, I could validate it.

Thank you.

All right, so I went to <https://hackforums.net/2fa.php> , I opened the Authy app on my phone, I opened the scanner, and scanned the QR code on the 2fa page, and I get an error which says "Cannot interpret QR code."

I tried this with the Google Authenticator too.

Omniscient - May 12, 2015, 9:24 am

@+One...I just looked and you never validated your Gauth. You need to scan the code. Then on the next page you enter the code.

will all scammers be closed, now?

lol i didn't even realize what i wrote until now

Omniscient - May 12, 2015, 9:41 am

@+One you must have a plugin or setting blocking the correct code.

Where it says "Enter code Put:" you should actually see an authentication code like
"ASDHF1SDH4SDJHDJK1".

So the actual image is invalid to scan.

Maybe I can work on an error system to detect bad codes. I think you're stuck in a loop. Click the validate link. Then look for a reset code link on HF. If you come to another page to enter the code then just enter nonsense and you'll definitely see the reset link.

Try that.

There are pros and cons to certain elements to be listed, but I'd say username changes and site infraction counts (times warned, banned or suspended, for example) would be nice, too.

I don't like the IP change part but I understand it. Reason for that is ISPs can change a person's IP often depending on the ISP and certain other factors. All of my IP changes are due to that, though they're quite low.

Obviously, if the pros outweigh the cons in terms of usefulness of an element to be included then it must be given. But personal safety and security is also a concern that must be considered.

All of this is my opinion, of course, and I'm not suggesting anything be changed as suggestions to site features and abilities are generally not allowed and frowned upon. Overall this feature is great but obviously I do have some personal commentary which I've now given and I'll just leave it at that. Good work!

Omniscient - May 13, 2015, 11:55 am

Quote:but I'd say username changes and site infraction counts (times warned, banned or suspended, for example) would be nice, too.

You can already view username changes from profile. Not sure that matters that much when it comes to any trusting factors for the Marketplace. As for warning and suspension info. Those are completely irrelevant too. Most warnings are site violations unrelated to Marketplace and even those that are they are not related to scamming. Also Ub3r can already see existing warning data. It's just not a factor.

I've noticed on my ip a few numbers change a lot when i log even though i use the same internet usually unless on my phone. Sometimes when I follow the ip info it even says my net is coming from a whole different provider and my location is some town 100 miles away rofl. Kinda weird but probably has something to do with your providers service.
