Thread: Can I lie about my info when purchasing an upgrade?

Introvert - May 17, 2015, 4:51 am

Can I provide false information (such as my name / address) when purchasing an upgrade? This is just for my own privacy concerns.

Thanks!

Autocorrect - May 17, 2015, 4:54 am

Don't do it. You pretty much just confirmed that you plan on doing it.

Your information will be completely secured unless you ever decide to chargeback a payment to Omniscient.

From then your personal information will be published for everyone to see in your signature... that's outlined in the legal policies.

No you may not. Any payments with fake information will result in your account being closed at HF. Every payment is manually inspected to check for fraud. We expect real phone numbers, addresses, and a matching IP location for the billing address. If you don't want to provide this data, then don't upgrade.

There you go. Answered already in the Help Docs.

Your mom?

Prob. not since you just said it...

If I was the owner of this site, then I wouldn't care as long as you're legit.

No, actually, my brother.

ViN - May 17, 2015, 6:04 am

Just use a legit Paypal and real info and you will be fine.

Trying to become staff this way isn't gonna work lol.

Someone else already posted this. Good try though.

OP, yes. Someone else can buy your upgrade for you. It's done quite a bit here on HF.

Is this what he said the last time the database was leaked?

Lold

I have seen plenty of members upgrade with fake info so I doubt you would get caught if you didn't create this thread.

Roger Waters - May 17, 2015, 7:57 am

Only do this if you want your payment refunded and your account closed. You will need to provide your legitimate information if you want to upgrade.
