Thread: Anyone who bought Nightfall Generator read this

Gary - May 17, 2015, 2:35 pm

If you have purchased the Nightfall Generator I advise you open a scam report on PostiveEnergy since the service is going to go down soon and he said it would be up for a couple months at least.

He's also a multiaccounter that scammed for a lot more on his old account.

Why should I open the scam report on him and not you?

He ran the backend and the payments portion, I simply hosted the thread.

But still you hosted the thread?

I know I did but I won't be able to refund you since I never received the money.

Can I get my money back even if I paid with BTC?

Open a scam report on him and I'll give you free access to my next product that will only be ran by me.

Show me proof that you have actually purchased the service and I'll set everything up for you after that.

Thank you for reading this. Deal with caution when dealing with him. Even though advise you don't deal with him at all.

How do you know PE is actually a multi-accounter, just curious.

I'm just going to be going off this information.

You sound dumb im not a multi. Vinnie tried bringing this up before. Also asking people to open a scam report on someone is harassment.

Also lifetime is for lifetime of the product.

Alex™ - May 17, 2015, 4:04 pm

I might not like him but you bought a lifetime product. If you got a lifetime product please don't dispute.

Not when they actually scammed lol. Most of the accounts didn't even work.

If any of you do open a scam report, send me the link to it and I'll add it to this list:

Another alert on PositiveEnergy, this is funny.

All I have to say is a lifetime purchase is when the software basically dies, You can't dispute that cause it's just common knowledge to be honest.

If the product didn't work then that's a different story and you can open a scam report.
