Null Consolidated is looking for 1-2 experienced programmers for our group projects.

You will be placed in Null's programming team so fluent English is obligatory.

You are expected to know how things work, this is not the student program.

Best applicants will be interviewed by Anakin™.

There's a part of the application called Programming languages you're willing to work in.

eg. I know C++ but I hate working in it. Therefore I won't work on a project that's being coded in C++.

I'll be the one to explain why we actually listed 10/10.

The reason why we have it rates 10/10 is to see who is narcissistic enough claim they're 10/10 and if they do we'll test them to their limits and find out if they're really 10/10. :^)

I have PM'd some of the applicants to test their knowledge.

If you have not been PM'd, it's probably because our current projects demand a different set of programming languages.

I'm looking for someone who tends to learn (rather than thinking he/she knows everything, like most of the applicants do), as I'll be mentoring you myself and I'll give you specific group-related tasks to further improve your knowledge.

An example of what I'm looking for is a decent Javascript developer who's willing to extend their knowledge to e.g. Angular, Node etc.

After I close the recruitment, I will read through all the public applications and PMs, so you might still get a PM from me.

Be unique and impress us.
