But I still wear watches whenever I go out, I don't use them for checking the time, just as an accessory. College girls love someone who looks like they have money. ;)

I used to wear my fathers Omega Seamaster Planet Ocean 600M. He had the orange one. It was given to him by his boss back in 2009 for helping with saving his company. My father sold it after he quit his job in that company.

[img]<http://i.picresize.com/images/2015/05/22/YWQi.jpg>[/img]

It was long ago. It might not be the same as in the picture, but it was similar.

Until recently I didn't know how much the watch was worth (around $5000).

You're not a proper man without a watch. That's a fact.

My daily's a Seiko, fits nearly everything. Being very thin it really suits formal shirts. If I want that "hipster" looks, I wear a solid gold Nairi with custom leather strap, though not being very cheap, I have to be careful where I wear it. And my next addition will be a tagheuer (actually Heuer, as the watch has been made during their team-up with TAG) 510.501, lemenia movement - supposedly bulletproof and very primitive, being a pilot's watch.

How anyone can go through the day without a watch! do you not think it's annoying having to pull your cell out to check the time, instead of flicking your writs.

Basis Peak for me.
