

Forum:Hack Forums

Thread: Google launches Google Photos, a new service independent of Google +

ZuGgY - May 28, 2015, 12:26 pm

Quote:Google has launched a new photos app called — appropriately — Google Photos. It aims to improve how you store and organize your huge photo collection. Three concepts for Photos are: a secure home for your media, organization and sharing.

Google Photos available today for iOS, Android and the Web.

You can edit photos in-app as well as create collages, animations and stories. Machine learning makes the app smart, Google says. Over time, Photos learns faces and will organize images based on the people in them — scanning for people, places, or things to organize them. A share option utilizes more than just Plus, as in the past.

Photos looks a lot like Photos in Google +, just without the unneeded social component. The pinch-to-zoom feature acts like Apple's Photos app and zooming in and out takes you to a more close-up view. It supports up to 16mp photos and 1080p videos.

You don't have to tag or label photos or create albums. When you want to find a particular shot, just do a simple search to instantly find any photo. Auto-grouping is private by default.

Photos will also bring Assistant, which helps manage your photos. Videos made from photos and video are also created automatically.

Source

Unlimited? Free? Finally Google? Now can you please upgrade your fucking space for Drive and mail?

FRANKIE - May 28, 2015, 12:27 pm

It will probably fail like a couple other of the Google projects

VRUMM - May 28, 2015, 12:27 pm

Let's be honest. Google+ is moronic on so many levels.

Kyle17 - May 28, 2015, 12:29 pm

hahah...

I think they mean "unlimited" in a twisted way where it is unlimited *if you pay
or maybe its just unlimited (time)
or unlimited (Upload and Download)

i dont think they would give unlimited HDD space... it would be too expensive for Google...
but i guess Google sells information to stay alive, and what better information than private photographs... a picture is worth 1000 words

ZuGgY - May 28, 2015, 12:29 pm

I cannot seem to get the iTunes page. Anyone get the app? I cannot find it on iOS anywhere.

SawCyanic - May 28, 2015, 1:31 pm

(May 28, 2015 12:29 PM)Jacob Zuma Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) hahah...

I think they mean "unlimited" in a twisted way where it is unlimited *if you pay
or maybe its just unlimited (time)

or unlimited (Upload and Download)

i dont think they would give unlimited HDD space... it would be too expensive for Google...

but i guess Google sells information to stay alive, and what better information than private photographs... a picture is worth 1000 words

Maybe they found a way to compress the photos a million times so it doesnt take up alot of space?

PiraX - May 28, 2015, 1:33 pm

This isn't new. I've had Google Photos on my Android phone since Lollipop came out.

Jokar - May 28, 2015, 2:47 pm

yeah just thought the same lie pirax :P

'Cynical - May 28, 2015, 2:48 pm

Google Photos has existed for awhile now...? Lol.

Pr0m3th3us - May 28, 2015, 8:41 pm

Im switching to Apple. Google is getting more and more ridiculous with its MONOPOLY. Tried to contact customer service the other day and they wouldnt have it for hours, then when i got through i noticed when i got off the phone my account wouldnt log in for hours....