Thread: Need: OpenVPN Custom Client for 143VPN

Eternal. - June 11, 2015, 4:30 pm

I am in need of a custom client that is unlike any on the current market, meaning it has to be something you created, not something you skinned.

It needs to be able to connect to a .php panel for opening ports, connect to OpenVPN servers, have a Twitter page on it with the Twitter API and route addresses to use their real address instead of the VPN on certain websites. I will also need to be able to easily update the servers and ports etc.

These are all features of the current OpenVPN client we have here if you want to check it out:

What we need different is a cleaner design, a coder willing to update it and it will need to not be encrypted with a crypter that will show up as a virus. We prefer it to be allowed to be open source.

If you can do this PM me with previous work, what you can do, and your price.

Still looking for someone who would be able to do this.

are you looking for it to run on windows/linux?

are you looking for a certain language in which it is to be written in? #whynotbash also i agree with the open source idea

I am looking for it to work on Windows, Mac and Linux would be a huge plus though. Language?
Whatever gets the job done most efficiently.

I'm a customer and can't wait for a new design the current one is starting to get plain. Hope you find someone willing to do this soon :D

Maybe a phone client as well if that's even possible just wanted to mention it.

I would prefer it to be different, a whole GUI instead of having to click the arrow to show the rest of the options.

Anyone able to do this for 143VPN?

Eternal. - July 22, 2015, 2:31 pm

Still looking for this to be done, don't even care at this point if it is a already created client just remade for 143VPN as our current client is broken.
