Charlotte

Description courtesy of ANN

The story centers around the special abilities that occur among a small percentage of boys and girls in puberty. Yuu Ootosaka uses his power without others knowing, and lives a fairly normal, average school life. Before him suddenly appears a girl, Nao Tomori. Due to his meeting with her, the fate of special power-users will be exposed.

I liked the first episode. Something unique about this was that they point out the limitations of their abilities early in the series. Usually, super-power series are usually one-sided and the wins are based on lucky strategies.

I started watching it & the first two episodes were decent.

I like the main character in this one because I've been fed up with mcs being powerful & acting all oblivious & stupid.

This guy is totally funny & a cheater.

I wish they don't change his personality over the course of the show.

Going to watch this on a weekly basis.

damn

i was expecting her to have powers once they brought up how siblings have a higher chance, but... damn.

Who's blood do you think they showed at the end? Yuu's, Ayumi's or someone else's?

CP of what I wrote on anilist:

Quote:I still think it's too high up and right in the open to be Ayumi's blood, she fell under a lot of rubble, not just under 1 or 2 large boulders. I'm still gonna guess Yuu. If Joujirou went in to help Yuu he would've crashed into all the other rubble and probably made the situation even worse, don't forget he can't control it well or stop without brute force.

SniperBMW - August 15, 2015, 12:54 pm

Episode 6 really setup a cliffhanger for different reasons, but episode 7 just wrapped up the aftermath in the first minute.

I really hope that in the future episodes the show won't act like nothing happened while the main character was away.

After what he has done, I don't know how he can return to a regular character considering that he has done some in-humane things.

Spoiler \(Click to View\) When he escaped from the men in black, he took control of one of their bodies and threw it over the ledge of a high-story building, which I can assume he murdered. Then he started stabbing people and almost smoked cocaine. It wasn't marijuana because it was a white crystal-like substance that was kicked out of his hands. A character whose done that much over a considerable amount of time can't just return to a normal state of mind; otherwise it's sort of a F.U. to the viewer. Maybe it was a reference to the quote said in earlier in the same episode: "Time can heal many wounds in this world. Though it won't heal everything."

K guys, I'm at episode 3 and I like that glass wearing guy's voice actor, the same one from Angel Beats (who also wore glasses XD).

But I think he's misunderstanding his power? It's more of a godly speed than a teleportation.
Idk what's the real logic behind teleportation btw xD I think of it like: stop time, go to where you want, resume time.

Spoiler (Click to View) Pretty much same here, but they mentioned a newfound telepathy user in that preview. I have a feeling it's the singer for ZHIEND since she always knew what was on Yuu's mind and the "feeling in the air" or "tone in your voice" seems like complete bullshit, there's no way you'd be able to pinpoint that someone close to him died by how he sounds or tell that he's thinking about his sister because "the air is gloomy"

Pretty bummed that the telepathy user wasn't blind-chan and just some irrelevant guy. ./

Pretty sure the "dream" is what happened before episode one, then the guy we saw in the "dream"(With the girl who can knock people out) erased his memories. So going by that, Yuu should have a load of stolen powers right now such as flight, telepathy, going through walls, the photography one, and whatever else he's stolen without knowing. Shocked that most of the theories people came up with on anilist are actually accurate.

Season two better happen with all these new things popping up.

power when they were talking.. Is it just kind of being able to use thier powers, but they themsleves can use it too? That's how I think of it right now.

Great, this makes the second episode to make me shed a tear, and seems next will too.

Fuck you Maeda Jun.

I'm gonna really miss Spoiler (Click to View) Misa and I'm not sure how I feel about the direction the series is going. Very curious on how this will wrap up.

SniperBMW - September 19, 2015, 10:36 pm

Wow. A 13-episode show can turn into a full 100+ episode series if he really goes through with this. I don't know how they're gonna wrap the show with one episode left.

I really hope they don't do a big-turn and do some time-skip and show the main character after he's completed the objective.

Yeah I'm sure they will show him in singapore & then wrap it up with a time skip & a conclusion.

lol za engurishu at the beginning xD

But nice ending, I loved it. Definitely an amazing anime.

JSTN - September 26, 2015, 4:35 pm

That power of courage tho, overall a good series. Definitely wasn't the best, but worth the watch. Would've been better if his journey wasn't just clumped into one episode, maybe could be even made into a spin off if you think about it.

CaligulaEffect - September 26, 2015, 4:38 pm

I kinda liked it but the ending didn't give a "Giant" Impact. I'd give it a 9.5/10. I wanted to see more emotion in the end, it felt too short.

Ang?I - September 26, 2015, 5:11 pm

I liked the ending a lot. Seeing what studio this came from I honestly expected a much more depressing ending.

Spoiler (Click to View) Charlotte is just one of those types of anime where I could sorta predict how the ending would be. Kinda unfortunate it was like that, but I always stick around for stunning visuals and dialog. Charlotte also had a unique story behind it in the sense that the goal was to get rid of all the powers, and not to "learn how to live with them."

Unfortunately it fell so short in the end where they had to rush the development and actual humanization/characterization of the newfound ability (at least, to the viewers) that Yuu possessed. The struggles Yuu went through were far too disappointingly short because it was decided that the final episode would be spent just scene after scene of him taking over new powers and such and thus slowly driving himself insane while losing memory of Tomori. Aside from his little "lucky charm," of course.

I feel like if they left the final episode off as a cliffhanger and just made a second season the anime could be so much more successful. The last episode could've remained exactly the same, but instead of immediately expressing frustration or memory loss, have it be much more gradual to his point of insanity.

Maybe actually allow him to go insane and kill a few people instead of stopping himself through some random jogged memory of "something important" or "a promise that must be kept" without ever knowing what that something is, why that something is important, or what that promise was. Or even what the significance of his notecards are.

Then the entire second season could be spent with Tomori finding and saving Yuu from himself and perhaps Tomori consoling Yuu and thus creating a much more interesting and touching story albeit very cliché to some other romance anime I know (Ef).

That's just what I want to see, though. I ship those two so god damn hard.

I rate it 8/10. Could've been 10/10, but the way it was pulled off wasn't anywhere near a train wreck.

Ok I enjoyed this show thorough, no regrets. Yeah there could've been more eps but since is Key studio, imma just wait for the eroge visual novel =P.

VYKTOR - October 7, 2015, 4:07 am

I liked the main character from the start.

Loved it when he went berserk under pressure.

Probably the only Anime I've watched that didn't leave a cliff hanger at the end & finish it in one season. One-Eyed Shinigami OP OP OP
