Check out director Makoto Shinkai. He's not overhyped like Miyazaki and has the best animations in his movies. You can screen cap any moment and have it be a wallpaper. His plots aren't exactly the best however they are decent. Another thing to keep in mind is that he leaves a lot open for viewer interpretation.

knew it as soon as you said he leave things open, 5cm/s was great although I haven't watched anything else of his. Any recommendations on which to watch next?

This has probably been their best so far - it was just beautiful throughout.

Loved that show, lots of characters but they weren't all the same. The music was great esp. since they weren't just instantly great and it actually reflects how school bands are. (conflict on to play for fun or for competitions, lots of practice needed, etc)

The animation quality was great too in terms of actually movement of characters. No cheapness involved.
