Thread: [\[Free\] \[Easy\] Realistic handwritten text tutorial](#)

PHAK3 - July 28, 2015, 4:14 am

So I've decided that its my turn to share some of my knowledge in the ways of eWhoring.

This tutorial will show you how to make very realistic text-on paper, for those of you who have this customer on the brink of purchase.

You'll need the following:A pen

Piece of paper

Photoshop

Camera or Scanner

To watch the tutorial: Click here \(Youtube\) « ?

Also, thanks to Fliiix for letting me use a picture from one of his packs in this tutorial! You can find his amazing packs here:

Please leave a comment with your thoughts, if I get some positive feedback I'll try to post a few more tutorials in the future.

Cheers!

Nice tutorial mate! I usually do the same. In photoshop you can choose " Multiply " as an easier way to remove the white background :P

Very true, however it only works if you have a scanner (or a good flash on your camera) since otherwise parts of the paper may not be bright enough. Thanks a lot for the input though ?

Very nice tutorial you've made. Would be useful for many.

Can you also do that text on a body instead of a sign?

The Godfather - July 28, 2015, 6:43 am

Many will find use of this.

Thanks for the contribution.

Yes, however I strongly discourage using this. The only time you'd want to do it on a body is if you have a customer that you know will pay extra if you do so (or if it really locks down a deal).

Reason being: You can almost always get away with drawing on your own skin (preferably using waterbased ink lol) and taking a picture of your arm. Or just tell him "how the hell am I supposed to write on my own boobs" and/or "lol, yeah I'm totally going to use a permanent marker on my tits without being assured you'll pay".

Even though a lot of people are easy to fool when eWhoring, when faking text / drawings on skin you need to adjust the drawings to the skin and light much more than on a paper in order to make it look realistic.

But basically, yes you can use this (or at least a similar technique) to get the text, keep in mind that its harder to write on skin as well, so make the text a bit distorted and use a big marker.

Oh and also make sure to fill in the lines a few times to make them completely black, as it would appear on the skin (on paper, ink usually gets a bit streaky as it sinks in to the paper, on skin, it becomes more of a layer).

I've already received a lot of positive feedback, I'll try to get a vid up later this week showing how to ink some skin :)
