Turn your PC off and find another one. Then change your credentials.
That's just for now, and what advice I can give you.

correction:

Turn your internet off and find another PC. Then change your credentials.

Turning of the internet is enough.

I think we're both stupid here.
You mean take the internet cable out of his computer right?
I thought you meant shutting his router off.

Download Farbar Recovery Scan Tool and save it to your Desktop.

Right click to run as administrator (XP users click run after receipt of Windows Security Warning - Open File). When the tool opens click Yes to disclaimer.

Press Scan button.

It will produce a log called FRST.txt in the same directory the tool is run from.

Please copy and paste the log back here

The first time the tool is run it generates another log (Addition.txt - also located in the same directory as FRST.exe/FRST64.exe). Please also paste that along with the FRST.txt into your reply.

When this happened to my little brother, what we did was save all data onto an external drive (after virus scanning the data) and then used a program that killed the hard drive.

On my computer, we got his account back and changed all credentials.

After this, we re-installed the OS onto his computer.

There's not much you can do, just for future reference you got to be more careful with links.
