Thread: [\[Release\] HF Live Player](#)

King of Hearts - August 8, 2015, 4:38 pm

Hello,

I recently developed a plugin for Tony Stark and his [HF Live - HackForums Community Radio \[24/7\]\[Requests\]\[Jobs\]\[Mobile Apps\]](#) by Tony Stark

Anyways, you can take a look at the plugin here.

Also, the plugin is opensource, and for those of you wishing to learn how to make Chrome Extensions, you make take a look at the source here

Feel free to post any suggestions, bugs and comments. If you don't understand the code (I know it's not commented, I was in a bit of a rush), feel free to post here and I'll try to explain it as best as I can.

Thanks,
KoH

I saw Tony created a thread saying it was out now. Thank you for creating this! Keep enhancing the features, I'm sure that this project will evolve into something big.

There better not be a backdoor like the last HF add-on xD
The source code is open source (but obviously my backdoors won't be detectable :p)...

Anyways, I've updated the plugin. It now has an option to show the player on all pages. If selected, the player will show up on all opened and new tabs. If unselected, the player will disappear from all tabs (except HF) and the player will pause.

Nice bro. Nothing personal, I dont normally use other peoples add-ons. The best way to stay virus free is to use your own programs

You know you can right click, inspect element and hit network tab and see al requests going through? Also, some chrome extensions have something called a "background script" (for example, my plugin and Adblock Plus). To view traffic being sent/received to/from the background page, type in chrome://extensions and click on "background page" and view it's network tab.

I would have made this a userscript, and in fact I did start one. However, it proved buggy and Tony asked me to convert it into an extension.

I've also made the script open source.

Thanks,
KoH

Can you make this for Firefox as well?

Yes, I plan on making one for Firefox also. I just need to get into Titans first, priorities, you know. :p

Hopefully, I'll have one ready by Friday or Saturday.
