Thread: Games that don't require a very long time to get into?

Cycloned - August 9, 2015, 1:28 am

Kinda been going from game to game recently, can't find something to stick to. They all require a rather large amount of time to get good at so you can enjoy the game.

Stuff I've played: LoL, Dota 2, CS GO (super fucking high skill curve here especially), WoW, SC2 and some others I'm forgetting.

I dabble in Minecraft, The Forest from time to time, but they don't really make me wanna stay.

Any ideas?

I would suggest you hearthstone. It doesn't need much time..Though its kinda pay to win like 60%

Played it for a good 4 months and then quit. Requires you to dish out a lot of cash for the latest and best cards and there's quite some RNG involved so I didn't really enjoy it.

There isn't really any games that will get you the same feeling as being good in Dota, CS, LoL, SC etc with less time. I'd probably suggest rocket league. That's a pretty competitive game but honestly putting the time in and getting good is what makes the above games good.

I play counter-strike, depends really on your past games what you have played.

I was a pro when i started, because i had played TF2, ect.

Seems mundane and obsolete at this point, but I'd play GTA 5. One of the best $70 I've ever spent online.

Some Arma 3 or Ark Survival Evolved?

Maybe try some MMORPGs?

Try wayward (unlok.ca website)

Nice survival perma-death. Good for some casual playing.

Try Smite or HoN they are pretty cool games.

Go for battlefield or Runescape lol.

Vitani's Mate - August 9, 2015, 1:23 pm

What about maplestory. The game is fun as fuck.

Doesn't that game just have a bunch of chinese gold farm bots still?

I swear, I've suggested this like 50 million times but go play San Andreas. Great game, easy to get into - for me it is, at least.

itzryzo - August 11, 2015, 2:14 pm

Csgo and smite are both games i found easy to get into =)
