Thread: [\[Official Group Royalty\] > Looking for Developers & Designers <](#)

Cibor - August 14, 2015, 9:45 am

Loyal and Royal Marketers

Royalty is a group focused on the marketplace and offers several benefits to its members.

Besides sharing knowledge and marketing strategies, I will personally and financially vouch for my members in their sales threads.

Potential customers will feel safer while seeing buyer's protection by an official HackForums group, therefore you can expect more sales.

Fear of getting scammed is a quite large factor in the process of buying products, and I believe we can get rid of that.

Buyer's protection rules:

1. Only deals through sales threads are protected, no offsite or through PMs
2. Product has to be verified by myself, if it's verified, my official post will be posted in the sales thread.

Developers

We are looking for a team of website and software developers who have extraordinary work and are well experienced in the field.

Describe yourself:

Hello, I am a 27 year old British male from the UK. I have been programming from an extremely young age and love anything related to IT, whether that is Encryption, Programming, Networking and much more.

I am quiet social and generally speaking like online forums. I have recently tried to settle in this community but of course not having many friends to socialize with has made it a bit of a challenge. I am hoping that if I soon release some application in this community, it will better aid me in digesting with the rest of the community.

I am also a gamer and currently play Counter strike alot. I have been everywhere though :P Mobas, MMORPGs, Grinding games and more.

Country:
United Kingdom

Years of experience:
11

Your past work experience:

I had the prestige of working with some professional web development companies, I have also got my hands into alot of web based development. Two years ago I started my own company in the UK, we offer development and hosting solutions. Due to the success of the company, I am now able to work full time running my company and creating innovative solution for our clients. Currently we are hosting over 92 websites which we have developed with our sister companies.

Inside of HF i have recently opened a web development/hosting service which has gone rather successful. I have recently finished a project for a HF member which can be found here. The thread for my service can be found here

Portfolio:

Alot of the websites I have developed are for businesses in the UK which have chosen to not have their information shared on public forums and communities. However, here are just someof the websites that I have developed:

Websites:

Should you request to see more of my work, I will supply them.

Fluent coding languages:

PHP, Javascript and Python (Pretty confident in a variety of other languages also)

Why should we let you into Royalty:

I honor that you have opened your doors for people to join you. I will try to aid the group to become a better entity than it is now. I will help it's members prosper and grow as individuals and as technical experts.

Above all, I would just love try and settle back into this community with a close group of people that i can call friends, who have the same areas of interest as me. This is purely for the fact that I do not have many friends in this forum and I think this group will help me in meeting new people and truly enjoy my time here.

I thank you for reading this application.

Best Regards

+Haze - August 14, 2015, 6:12 pm

Just my opinion but if you're going to hold an recruitment event on programming, it would be very wise to have to people who actually code themselves to review the applications if you're not already doing that.

From the current applications, I can already spot two very dodgy applicants. Two of the people that have claimed to have good programming knowledge/experience have actually came to me for my programming services in the last week.

My point is, don't solely judge peoples abilities by their years of experience or "quality of application". Look more at what they have accomplished within the time they've been given.

Anyway, I retracted my original application form.

It's a win win for both people.

Royalty can get some programmers that are easier to contact and can work for a slightly cheaper than normal and i'm being honest here, Userbar's sell products on HF so if a coder wants to sell their own shit they can.

I think you're not getting my point.

You are looking for developers to earn money from them, post the software and a fee for them. I've seen this in many groups.

Now I ask you, are you going to do that? Is there any plan on the group like what should devs do?

Your logic is wrong, you also assume too much, I'm not looking for developers to earn money from them, if any, then FOR them if I or other members bought some services from them.

About plans, sure we have plans, everything takes time.

Not to add another attack but.. It sounds like you want people to make these products (design and code) for free and pay them with invitations to the group. The reason I say this is because you've yet to describe how you plan on paying or even talk about if you are paying. No decent programmer wants to join a project without a down payment and the same goes for designers. It's too much of a risk, and I'm sure you can understand why. This type of recruitment will attract mediocre or beginner programmers and designers only. I suggest hiring a full time programmer and designer. If I had to lead you towards a designer I would have to go with Rivalry, or Ben D. I have no clue about programmers though.

I look forward to your reply!

Loyal and Royal Marketers

Why do you want to join Royalty:

Networking with ambitious marketplace minded entrepreneurs is intuitive. You'd be stupid to not apply to Royalty.

You have an extensive background in the marketplace here. I'd like to work with you, because it's the smart thing to do.

Describe yourself:

My motto is "under-sell, over-deliver"

Developing code and graphics is a means to an end for me.
I have a way with words. I am "objective" - and I take risks if the gains are substantial.
I'm a marketer, developer, and graphic designer who prefers a slow paced, efficient, fast workflow environment.
I take my time very seriously, and will only ever sacrifice my time for a price - or a group of like minded individuals...
Aside from that I'm a gamer, debater, and artist - Equipped with a very high-powered, fully functional, master quality set of satirical skills.

Dirty hands don't weigh heavy on my conscience when it concerns the bottom line, because supporting your team is more important.
Thus, common sense, respect for tactics, and attention to detail are three attributes that you can expect from me, because I understand the power of networking.

Why would you leave Royalty:

With respect to business models - I will not be a number, nor a slave.

Lack of transparency is the number one reason I have for leaving any group.

The second reason for leaving a group would be a failure to respect my anonymity.

I always deal as safely as possible, and will not disclose my personal information ever.

As such there are certain group communication services I simply don't utilize:SKYPE

IRC

URL SIGN UPS/ACCOUNTS

I will only ever communicate through posts, private messages, or emails.
