

Forum:Hack Forums

Thread: New MMO Development and Programming Forum

ThisWay - August 18, 2015, 10:13 am

A new adventure of mine, hopefully will attract tons of contributors, and even YOU if you feel you can share something

Website: kryptoDEV.com

Featuring Curated list of popularly released MMO server files and emulators kryptodev.com/downloads for no-hassle downloads, discussion and individualized guides and help section to help with server setups.

Forum is primarily Targeted towards an audience that wants to create their own game servers while learning about how everything works, web development, server administration, website advertisement and so on.

The site is free to visit, download and discuss as we speak however heavy plans include coding kryptoDEV exclusive emulators for a large number of latest MMO games online today.

Feel free to review, advice, and critique the site, design, content and etc.

Thank you for taking the time to read this.

URL: <https://www.kryptodev.com>

PS. Looking for marketing partners. Interested folks PM me ?

Bump :) Kindly someone take their time to post a review :)

SamPhisher - August 19, 2015, 1:46 pm

Here's some feedbackstuffs.

First off: "KryptoDev", as an outsider I have no idea what Krypto means and I wouldn't connect the dots to see it's relevance to MMO development.

Secondly, based only on the screenshot: It's a bit of a clusterfuck, sorry. My eyes get drawn towards the content, away from whatever's in the menubar area. I can't easily read the text either because there's too much noise (various random characters) behind the title. The black background for the other text looks unprofessional, unfinished, as if you gave up on trying to make it work and just threw a bad background behind the text.

The content isn't properly centrally aligned, either, contributing to the unfinished look. You could start fixing this by using less characters in your image, using an image with a background so the characters don't contrast so much with the purple background or using an image without characters. As for the text itself, try using subtle dropshadows to make it stand out a bit more. For the subtext, you might want to start a new line with "Daily downloads ...". Just please, never use a background like the black background you used on that subtext.

Going back to the logo, it's got too much going on. I can't make out it's supposed to say KryptoDev, rather, it reads as Krypt [hand] Dev. There's something else about that hand that doesn't play well when used in the wordmark of KryptoDev. I'd advise getting your logo reworked or not using it in your wordmark at all.

Furthermore, "DMCA THIS" might be a fun inside joke, but doesn't make any sense when viewing the website as a new visitor and might even throw some people off thinking you're doing illegal stuff or whatever. It adds more noise that shouldn't have to be there.

The 3 buttons are too close together, as well. It looks a bit cramped up in the center of that page. Try to space them out a little bit.

And so much damn purple. I get that purple's your site's color, but try to keep it more as an accent than a main background color. Not all purples work well for backgrounds. The background gradient outside of the content container has too much going on and doesn't contrast nicely with the other purple of the container. I'd suggest getting a simpler background gradient or some image of scenery or whatever. Anything but these rainbow gradients.

Moving on to the rest of the site: Everything below the header area looks nice and clean, nice job. I have just a few minor remarks.

First of all, this part doesn't make much sense to me. I don't know what order it's in, or if there's any sort of order present in the first place.

Spoiler (Click to View)

Secondly, when viewing any other page, this header area still shows up. This honestly shouldn't have to be on any page other than the homepage. It's huge and takes away from the content on the content oriented pages.

Spoiler (Click to View)

This is a cool little feature but because of that huge header area it looks weird when you're not scrolled past it. Fixing that other thing should make this look like it belongs there.

Spoiler (Click to View)

Overall, these things should be easy enough to fix, and you've done a very neat job with your site so far. It just needs a bit of tweaking here and there, but so far definitely a solid 6.5/10 so far!

Hope this feedback was useful enough :)

Alex - Arvix - August 19, 2015, 3:29 pm

Good luck with the forum. Overall you do have a good looking website though the text: "oin the newest MMO Development and Programming community in the block! Daily downloads, community help/support, member+ privileges and more await you. Join Us today!" on the homepage (in the black background) seems rather slapped on / doesn't fit very well.

Other than that, good luck with the forum!

SIM-2833669 - August 20, 2015, 3:32 pm

Site looks good! Keep it up!

n3y4k0 - August 20, 2015, 11:48 pm

Hopefully you'll find a better background to replace this shitty ass gradiant..

But nice concept.

SamPhisher - August 22, 2015, 4:55 pm

People have kindly taken their time to review your site but I wonder if you even took the time to read through them after attempting to your own thread, specifically asking for said feedback.