Thread: Chargebacking User | aerodynamic | uid=1639936

Update - August 18, 2015, 12:19 pm

After searching for the person who decided to put my Paypal to negative balance and basically halting all of my business I do here on HF, I found who charged back.

EDIT: Talked to Paypal and ended up winning the dispute.

This user bought my e-book and never messaged me after purchase or messaged me on Skype, so I was clueless to who I should have contacted.

I didn't manage to get a screenshot, but when I was investigating this his last log in date was just a week after the date he bought my e-book. Im guessing he just needed some money so he decided to charge back. He claims its "not him" over PM which clearly makes no sense.

I'm not too worried about this, I've been talking to Paypal and I should be receiving my money back.

If a loss of $19 halted your business, you should consider changing the source of your income.

In that case, the proof you provided in your bragging thread must be fake.

Anyways, if you need help with the chargeback, let me know.

A loss of $19 is nothing. But when someone chargebacks it does not let me send or withdraw money from my Paypal. That thread was 100% though.

Chargebacks are always annoying as fuck, if you get too many in a short period your account ends up god damn limited.

reason #995353 to not use paypal, it's unfortunate the majority of users use it though so you'd miss out on a ton of sales.

Sorry this happened, hopefully it won't screw you up too much.

I don't get why people charge back $20 or some shit like that.

That's honestly like 10 minutes of me wiping my ass, even less somedays.

gl op.

Looks good.

Hopefully this gets resolved.

Skrill is the way to go.

BTC for being deephat.

Paysafecard.

Gift cards.

Paxum.

Swish (if you are from sweden)
Google Wallet.
ProPay.
Western Union.
