Thread: Rest In Peace - Grandfather <3 \(My Best Friend <3\)

Regulus - August 24, 2015, 6:20 pm

I can't even think right now. My grandfather passed away today due to cancer. He was my closest friend and I spent time with him everyday. We had such a fun time.

I'm crying constantly and I don't know what to do really. It hurts, it hurts so bad, it really does. He passed away 18:15 (6:15) PM today.

Here's a picture of me and my grandfather when I was a little kid. <3

Rest in peace beautiful lovely grandfather <3

I'm sad to hear about this event, hopefully you'll get over it and recover.

Oliver Sykes - August 24, 2015, 7:27 pm

I hope you can recover from this fairly soon Regulus. Death is a hard thing to go through.

Off-topic: My...mother's cousin's husband passed away recently (Today or yesterday) and posted that same song on Facebook in his remembrance.

Regulus - August 24, 2015, 7:27 pm

Thanks everyone. It really hurts, he was my best friend and it will take some time to recover. Mad respect for everyone though for showing support.

I fucking love you all. I'll open the second vodka bottle soon. <3

Ah, that really sucks. I'm sorry for your loss.

And yes, fuck cancer.

My grandma died August 6th due to it as well, and she had just been diagnosed with stage 4 lung cancer in the beginning of July. Within a month, it spread and took her over. She was in hospice for like two days before she actually passed.

She was like my best friend too. She used to live down the street from me up until about middle school, but her and I constantly talked on the phone and stuff.

I was actually supposed to fly down there in like October to go see her with my son when he was like a month old, but she didn't make it.

Fuck cancer right in the asshole.

Every time I see someone that's coping with the death of a loved one, I share this. I hope it helps you out. If you're having a tough day, reread it. It rings true. Best of luck with your recovery.
We are all here for you.

"Alright, here it goes. I'm old. What that means is that I've survived (so far) and a lot of people I've known and loved did not. I've lost friends, best friends, acquaintances, co-workers, grandparents, mom, relatives, teachers, mentors, students, neighbors, and a host of other folks. I have no children, and I can't imagine the pain it must be to lose a child. But here's my two cents.

I wish I could say you get used to people dying. I never did. I don't want to. It tears a hole through me whenever somebody I love dies, no matter the circumstances. But I don't want it to "not matter". I don't want it to be something that just passes. My scars are a testament to the love and the relationship that I had for and with that person. And if the scar is deep, so was the love. So be it. Scars are a testament to life. Scars are a testament that I can love deeply and live deeply and be cut, or even gouged, and that I can heal and continue to live and continue to love. And the scar tissue is stronger than the original flesh ever was. Scars are a testament to life. Scars are only ugly to people who can't see.

As for grief, you'll find it comes in waves. When the ship is first wrecked, you're drowning, with wreckage all around you. Everything floating around you reminds you of the beauty and the magnificence of the ship that was, and is no more. And all you can do is float. You find some piece of the wreckage and you hang on for a while. Maybe it's some physical thing. Maybe it's a happy memory or a photograph. Maybe it's a person who is also floating. For a while, all you can do is float. Stay alive.

In the beginning, the waves are 100 feet tall and crash over you without mercy. They come 10 seconds apart and don't even give you time to catch your breath. All you can do is hang on and float. After a while, maybe weeks, maybe months, you'll find the waves are still 100 feet tall, but they come further apart. When they come, they still crash all over you and wipe you out. But in between, you can breathe, you can function. You never know what's going to trigger the grief. It might be a song, a picture, a street intersection, the smell of a cup of coffee. It can be just about anything...and the wave comes crashing. But in between waves, there is life.

Somewhere down the line, and it's different for everybody, you find that the waves are only 80 feet tall. Or 50 feet tall. And while they still come, they come further apart. You can see them coming. An anniversary, a birthday, or Christmas, or landing at O'Hare. You can see it coming, for the most part, and prepare yourself. And when it washes over you, you know that somehow you will, again, come out the other side. Soaking wet, sputtering, still hanging on to some tiny piece of the wreckage, but you'll come out. Take it from an old guy. The waves never stop coming, and somehow you don't really want them to. But you learn that you'll survive them. And other waves will come. And you'll survive them too. If you're lucky, you'll have lots of scars from lots of loves. And lots of shipwrecks."

Regulus, you know I'm always here whenever you need to talk. I don't want to message you on Skype or anything because I'm not sure if you do want to talk. But remember you're an amazing person to me here and we've talked about a lot. So please don't hesitate to message me.

I lost my grandmother a couple months ago. I'm not sure if I was as close to her as you were to him, but I can confidently say I can relate to what you're going through. I also lost my stepdad a couple years ago. Cry it out, let it out, do whatever you need to do. But don't hold it in. Stay strong and remember you have family and friends that are there for you. Included here on HF.

I know everyone says this, but he's in a better place now. He's not suffering anymore <3
