Here's mine:

2015 Dodge Charger SRT Hellcat

My shit box Econo Lancer Evolution smokes them in a straight line and around turns.

I just laugh at people who think their M3 and M5 or S4 S6 is just the fastest on the road and need to drive like a complete douche bag. They also think they can drive well too. I know of a few people who track their E46 M3's and yes they are faster than me..... in fact I just had a track day not too long ago and I had to let him pass me because he was catching up on the turns... but I would pull on him on the straights. THAT guy can drive... but 95% of all Audi S line/ BMW M Series think they are hot shit. I just follow that up by doing a simple 30-40 MPH roll and slow down to see their reaction.

Another story... I was peacefully driving up to a dealership 45 minutes away to get a part. What do you know... Audi driver just comes flying next to me. Well I am a competitive guy so I followed him and we did 1 pull. Lets just say I put him in his place =). I believe it was a an Audi with the V6 Supercharger. S4?? I might be wrong but I remember seeing S badges on it.

Tesla Model S

The P85D is fucking incredible. This thing has incredible torque from those electric engines. It beats a fucking Aventador from a dig race but not in the long run. Those things are still amazing.

As a gear head myself, this car is an amazing machine. All that horsepower and torque and lighter than a GTR. It's sex on wheels. Manual tranny, rear-wheel drive, and that beautiful supercharged V8.

My brother got passed on the road by one of these and didn't even hear it go past him since it's silent. Seriously the future of cars right there.

The only real response here:

I'd get the most expensive car and then sell it and buy a Ferrari or Lamborghini (doesn't really matter to me) and use the rest on other unrelated material things.

Jugs - August 29, 2015, 9:19 pm

I would get a matte black Nissan GTR with black rims OMG

Undamaged - August 29, 2015, 9:37 pm

Nissan R32, R33, R34 or a newer GTR. I'd consider a Silvia S13 or S15.
