Thread: View Your Purged Reputation

c x y k - August 30, 2015, 4:43 am

If you wish to view your new purged reputation, before it's purged via the system, you can install this userscript:
[deleted]

You can then view your reputation page, and it will look something like this:

[deleted]

GUIDE TO READING REPUTATION

Your new reputation depends on two factors -

Whether or not Omniscient removes closed account reputation.

Whether or not Omniscient removes reputation older than two years.

If it's the first case, then your purged reputation will be the pink value.

If it's the second case, your purged reputation will be the yellow value.

If it's both cases, then your reputation will be the blue value.

An example:

If Omniscient removes only closed account reputation, my new reputation will be 505 from 594. If he removes reputation older than two years, it'll be 594 since my reputation has all been given within two years. If he removes closed account reputation and reputation older than two years, it'll once again be 505 since I've not received reputation older than two years. If I had one rep which was a negative of 3 two years ago, it'd be 508 - since the rep was removed.

Haha, you're welcome bud. The source is messy, I didn't really focus on making it look nice since I've only just woken up, but it's effective and it works.

Search google for tampermonkey/greasemonkey depending on your browser, then visit the page.

Thought so. Somebody else was on Firefox and said it didn't work, I think it is an issue with greasemonkey. Use the newest version, see if that works. If it doesn't, post your URL and the page contents.

It works for me now, showing the right amount! Wouldn't it be cool if it had an option to disable seeing all the purged reps and an option to see them again? Actually what'd be cool would be if you could keep the purged reps after the clean-up, somehow cached.

I could do that.. But pointless in my opinion.

I'll remove the closed accounts reps, but no point caching them.

I wouldn't want to have to cache all the data, there'd be a whole lot, and accounts get closed all the time. If I done it client-side caching it'd be pretty pointless unless you visited a large amount of profiles.

Yes, but that's not the point. Collecting a large amount of data, just so you can see it multiple times is pointless. To get the cached data you'd have to view the users reputation, unless I made it run in the background, so pretty pointless.

Red is closed account amount.

Yellow is reputation older than two years.

Blue is older than two years and closed account - I should probably change it to if its closed or two years old.

Red is closed account amount, I get it. Blue is closed + two years or older removed.

The numbers don't change. They're the same, however I have reputation from non-closed members from more than two years ago. I am assuming you're saying Omniscient won't delete ANY reputation from 2013? Because it's basically September 2015 now, and I have rep from August and before in 2013.

The numbers don't change because blue ignores reputation that is closed and old. Not closed or old, which it should be. I'll fix it when I wake up.

The script calculates two years from the current date.
