Thread: Need A Free Spanish Translator?

Scar . - September 2, 2015, 10:14 am

I can translate any type of documents, e-mails, messages or even a phone call from Spanish to English. Spanish is my native language and I took 3 years of Spanish in school. I can write and speak it fluently. Maybe you would like to expand your market to a Spanish speaking forum. What ever it is, just PM me and I'll be glad to help you.

This is a nice giveaway, I know a lot of people use online translators but I don't think they conjugate verbs properly?

I suppose you're not from Spain but from South America.

Good luck with this, even tho I don't know how professional does that spanish look.

Nope, I was born in the U.S to my parents who are Mexican and Spaniard mix.

And thanks to both of you!

no digas que el español es tu lengua nativa si tuviste que coger 3 años de clases but anyways nice service u have! :)

good luck!

I took 3 years because of my high school. They require d 3 years of a foreign language to graduate, too lazy to learn something else.

Thanks! Translated for someone already.

He never said he had to take those 3 years of classes, maybe he chose to. That's what I'm doing next year because it's basically free marks.

Anyway Scar bro I think it's really cool that you're doing this for people! It's not often I see other Spanish-speaking people on HF. Keep it up ?

I actually did have to haha, my graduation requirements were at least 2 years of language classes.

I like this service?

Very nice of you to translate it for free!

Good luck with your service, sir?

??? I feel stupid now >_<

I meant 'had to' in the sense that you had to take them to learn Spanish because you didn't know it already, not because you were made to by someone else. Guess I should have made that a bit clearer

Ahh I see, and I actually took Dual-Cred native speaker Spanish. Not the on reg that non speakers take. Native Speakers teaches the "proper" way to read and write it.

Scar if your school offered the same tests my school offers to give you credit for speaking the language, you failed by not taking that test. I went to Dual Language k-8, so going into high school I started off with two full credits.

I didn't take language classes in middle school. I was too lazy.
