It's from HP and it's legit. You must be stupid then. ?

Treyswaq - September 4, 2015, 12:43 am

yea my bad i didnt look at it right LOL

?clipse™ - September 4, 2015, 12:08 pm

Thanks for the share, looks like a decent desktop pc.

skylarz - September 4, 2015, 2:44 pm

Holy shit this deal is legit good if you don't plan on overclocking in the future

Liquhfy - September 4, 2015, 3:16 pm

Its not even a good deal you have to pay extra for all the good parts.

Kevin?? - September 4, 2015, 6:50 pm

Shows $875 but when you click on the link it's $799

You have to upgrade some of the parts which costs extra. The total savings is like $370 from this.

In the process of buying this. Don't plan on doing hardcore gaming, just going back into the CSGO scene and play some LOL as well.

Thanks for this link!

Yeah but it's better than my mistake of buying an alienware for $1200 that had shittier parts.

Doesn't have a SSD though. Can you recommend a external SSD?
Budget like $100, will pay more if needed for a good performance.

On a closer inspection the deal has expired. The price of the same specs off-deal is over $1250 which can be bested by a custom build. If you still want to rock it, go right on ahead. But you WILL need that 500W PSU upgrade.

Internal SSD because external SSDs has USB bottlenecks.

They had some coupons that bought the price down to about $850 but I've decided not to get it. Sorry for taking your time. I'll probably just build a PC myself.
