I got an email from Skype saying I changed my email address to something else which was a throwaway email (on web. de) Atm I contacted skype but when I went through the whole form and filled out a good amount of info it says I gotta wait 72 hours, anyone here know if this is reliable? Do they even bother looking at it? If not can someone help me get it back is the question...

Anything anything at all help ;-; <_<

If you personally cannot recover your account though skype's automated system then the chances are no one here will be able to help you get it back through those means either.

Surely you could just start a new Skype account? I know it's a hassle and all but it tends to take the power right out of the attackers hands if the account they have is something you genuinely don't give a shit about.
