This whole thing is such bullshit

- 1- Makes 200k a year, decides he doesn't want easy money
- 2- Wants to make less than 200k but with a lot greater effort
- 3- In the next paragraph he decides to sell his "method" to someone

Too bad that I haven't scammed anyone, and last person that told me I'm a scammer actually ended up getting $500 from me (donation) because he FINALLY understood and took some time to ACTUALLY read the reports.

If I'm "known" for something I haven't done, I don't think we need you to post about it on my thread as it's unrelated to the topic I'm discussing. Don't start beef when you're clueless about the situation thank you.

You do realize how absurd it sounds

"I make $200k/year with no much effort

I have that money but my access to computer will be limited (perhaps moving to Afghanistan or Syria or smthng)

I will better work hard every day to make less money"

Logic is worse than woman's.

And better yet, use your methods for 2 more weeks and gain those $9k you want to "invest in your new business" than sell the method, what's the difference?

My access to computers and such will be more limited, simply because I won't make up time for it. While it's given me more money than both your parents (and you) make a day, it still takes up all my time and energy, whilst I'm wanting to explore life more IRL, and see it from other perspectives than living a lavish lifestyle getting everything I want (from myself).

Uh huh, and explain why working hard on the computer (making "1k-5k" per day, mind you) for a month straight and therefore saving up "30k-150k" and then travelling for a year wouldn't be a better option?

Money doesn't make me happy, infact it makes me even depressed at times because of how easy I make it.

I'm also very young so this isn't giving me a good influence about how life really is for most people, and I'm literally not respecting anyone aside the people I care about IRL because of this. Money has also caused other problems for me, but although it has also helped me a lot with different things.

I can't travel unless I want to bring my parents (as I'm too young), and trust me that's not what I want to do.

If I'd have a family, kids, a girlfriend/wife or anyone that I'd love with all my heart and wanted to take care of, I'd probably maximize my earnings for 2-3 months and then chilled for a year or two easily.

I spend most of my money on healthy food and designer clothing / other clothing that I use for my gym workouts, also a lot of electronics lately. But I'm getting my own bank account in a few weeks, where I'll put most of my earnings and then save them for when I get older and require them to something else than exactly what I want everytime.

I've also spent $30k+ on people at my school (yeah I know they used me but whatever), and I've spent ALOT on other people.
