Thread: Ask me anything

ZeroOne - September 12, 2015, 5:55 pm

Hello guys, I quit playing Runescape recently but I still am following up to most of the stuff that happens in the game and I have alot of experience in the game since I've played it for atleast seven years. I will answer any question that has to do with anything related with Runescape except anything that has to do with:

- 1.Hacking accounts
- 2.Scamming RSGP
- 3.Botting (I haven't botted ever)
- 4.Anything that has to do with "Hunter" just because I only leveled it with divine locations.

Cheers! ?

Edit:

I'm officially back to this game now and have begun grinding out my skills to max out! These are my current stats:

I believe asking "Hans" in "Lumbridge" only reveals your account's current age and whether or not you qualify for the "5-year veteran cape" and the "10-year veteran cape" not how many days you have actually played on the account.

If your account is upgraded go to your "Adventures log" and you will find the actual time you have spent on your account.

Quote:A player can examine or talk to him. When spoken to, Hans says, "Hello. What are you doing here?" The player is then given four options:

"I'm looking for whoever is in charge of this place,"

"I have come to kill everyone in this castle!"

"I don't know. I'm lost. Where am I?"

"What do you do here?" (If a member)

By choosing the fourth and final option Hans will tell the player he's been patrolling Lumbridge Castle for years to which the player will respond saying he must be old. Hans then goes on to say he is a Veteran of RuneScape and at this point will offer the player the option to buy the Veteran Cape if they have the requirements. If they do not have the requirements, he will tell players how much longer they have until they may buy the cape.

Quote:The veteran cape (5 year) is one of the Capes of Distinction commemorating players who have held RuneScape accounts for five or more years. It is currently available to accounts that were created before 10 September 2010. Players may obtain this cape from Hans, who may be found wandering the grounds of Lumbridge Castle, for a cost of 50,000 coins. Players who do not quite meet the requirements of having an account five years or older will be informed how many days they have left until they may claim the cape

Nothing on the official "Runescape Wiki" states that Hans tells you how much time you have played on your account.

I don't think you do give a shit about what I have to say and I am not telling you to even remotely care about it. Other members might have unanswered questions that they might want to ask and that's the whole point of this thread.

In what situation are seismics better than a nox staff?

Generally "Seismics" are better than "Nox staff" dps wise due to a couple of reasons.

I did some research and asked a couple of my friends and used the information I already knew to come up with this:

Seismics are better than Nox Staff when it comes to dps since you can easily switch out your off-hand for a shield if you're in a situation where you're forced to tank and still do damage at the same time. (An example would be your tank dying at either the "Kalphite King" or "Nex").

Ability wise, I personally remember testing this, Nox staff is a little more efficient due to the animation of two abilities you normally spam using "Mage", "Concentrated Blast" for seismics and "Sonic Wave" for Nox staff. "Sonic Wave's" attack animation is much better since you can instantly cast another ability when you use it, however, when it comes to "Concentrated Blast" you would want to wait till atleast your second blast's animation come out and most of the time you cut it there and that doesn't utilize the ability's full potential. I believe a few people have tested the mechanics of both abilities and even though "Sonic Wave" gives that bonus accuracy bonus, seismics still had faster dps.

I hope you find this helpful.

Seismics are higher DPS when you are standing still, and using full manual combat style. You are correct that concentrated blast and sonic wave are what makes the difference. If you have time to properly cancel concentrated blast, it will result in a slightly higher DPS. This is why you see people using seismics at Vorago but not at ROTS. If you are using revolution however, noxious staff is always better.

There's still a lot of debate over amulets, so I'd like to hear your opinion on Zealots vs Blood vs Reaper.

(Sep 14, 2015 08:13 PM)P?ris?m Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) Hey, what's the best way to make money PvM as a fresh maxed account? Thanks!

In my opinion, the best way to PvM for consistent money is "Slayer". If, by your question, you meant bosses then that would be duo nex kills or trio speed kills. Nex is a boss that has amazing common and uncommon drops like, coal, magic logs, onyx bolts and d'hide. Also I believe its rare items drops are one in twelve or thirteen kills. Another reason I said nex rather than Vorago or Rots for example is because it doesn't require as much skill and the gear/weapons requirements aren't as expensive.

I actually had a debate over those amulets with a couple of my friends before and honestly, I didn't end up with anything. I think out of all three "Zealots" is the one I personally prefer the most since it boosts everything but like everything it does have its downside which is the prayer drain. If you don't mind the prayer drain, I would recommend it. I'd also very much like to hear your opinion on this.

Depending on how skilled you are, you can easily solo Nex for consistent money. If you have good RNG however, you can try "Arraxor". The boss is fairly easy once you learn the mechanics, I did my very first solo in void!

For easier bosses, I suggest soloing "Kree'arra"(Arma) or "K'ril Tsutsaroth"(Zammy) in the GWD. I have always preferred "Kree'arra" because, in my opinion, its easier to solo than "K'ril Tsutsaroth" due to the special attack "K'ril Tsutsaroth" does. The drops aren't really great at both bosses but its still something to do as a beginner. Prayer is the normal routine of going to a PoH and using your dragon bones on a guilded altar with lit burners. I suggest you do it in your own house with a familiar since it could be a little faster.

Grinding out your skills does indeed require a lot of patience and everyone has problems with it. If its an afk skill like mining or woodcutting for example you can watch a TV show and switch windows every now and then to click the tree or rock etc depending on what you're doing and go on watching whatever show you pick. This is how I grind all afk skills.

Honestly, I found god wars dungeon armor the most efficient thing while doing slayer since it doesn't degrade. It saves you a lot of money on the long run and its good enough DPS for tasks and has good defense bonuses, so basically you don't have to go through a lot of food/prayer.

Yes, doing POP is worth it for superior tetsu but some players might disagree with it.

Water fiends drop a decent amount of them if you wanna camp for charms. Also seeing you have a maxed account, you can with proper gear, DPS KK and get the huge charm drops. If I remember right, its 13/kill.

If you're maxed and have overloads/curses, I highly recommend GWD but the money is dependent on your luck.
