Thread: Says he is going to pay for my flight?

BBanks - September 23, 2015, 2:59 am

Hi HF! I'm new here and new to e-whoring. I was on my e-whoring Facebook profile and this guy from Egypt added me and was very flirty and whatnot (y'all know how these guys are) and he started describing Cairo to me and I started expressing how badly I would love to go and about 10 minutes later he said he could PAY for my flight!

I think things are going pretty smooth with him right now, but what should I say? Has anyone ever had luck with this kind of scam? I would like to hear if anyone has any similar experiences and how they went.

Nahh most times they're fucking around and just want free nudes + hes egyptian probably wont even send you 1$ dont waste your time with him ik you will and ik u'll keep trying cuz you think that hes really going to send you it lol

Seer - September 23, 2015, 3:03 am

Don't give up because the guy above me says so, just test the waters and wait to see what happens. It isn't very uncommon for someone to actually go through with the payment. He's probably fucking around more than likely though.

I'm gonna try and ask him to send me the money and if he says why then I'm going to try to say its because my dad is going to help pay for some of it. Does that sound good or is it obvious?

He doesn't want your dad in the picture, he wants you alone, because all guys that you ewhore are creeps.

_AtomicLunchBox - September 23, 2015, 3:10 am

If he doesn't pay you when you say pay me now. Just block him

Haha yeah true. I'll say he's not coming with me but he will help pay. Or should I say my mom is helping pay? Maybe talking about my mom will keep his hormones flowing?

Of course, that's rule one ;)

Naw, I would make it sound like the parents don't know at all. Make him pay it in full. The more cash the better

Too late for that one. I told him I would tell my dad as soon as he got home from work. Maybe I should look for a more expensive airline? And just cut the price on that, saying, "My dad will pay for XXX amount, so you only have to pay for XXXX." That way I would make it sound like I'm doing him a favor?

(Sep 23, 2015 03:40 AM)Actress Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) Best advice I can give to you - is continue talking to him.

While talking to him look up flight information, screenshot flight prices and show him an estimation of how much this flight will cost.

Tell him you'll need a "round trip" so that you know you won't end up stranded in a foreign place with no one to help you.

From here, it's pretty simple (if he's serious) - schedule a date, find a flight and pick one that he can purchase and save all the information for it.

Save the flight number, the price (down to the taxes etc) and all the itinerary information (look up available seats - expedia has a diagram on this.)

Pick a window seat. Go on Instagram and look up #flight, #flights, #locationyouareflyingto and save as many pictures as proof of this entire trip.

If he's sent the money for the flight - fake an itinerary, show him proof you bought it with all the necessary details that he requests and then wait.

When it comes time for you to fly? Either pull the "I'm too nervous, I don't know if I can do this." Or be smart and tell him you're on the way.

Send him pictures of the flight (tell him you bought WiFi on the plane) of the sky from your #windowseat picture from Instagram and you're good.

When you land - tell him you can't find him. Text him, show him a picture someone else took on Instagram at #Airportnamehere and say "Where are you?"

Then play the whole "I can't find you" with a couple hours later saying your mom bought a ticket for you to fly back.

Also - Flip any images horizontally that you save from Instagram to reduce the chances that he can reverse image search them.

If you need more information, I have plenty for you. Message me.
Wow! That's a lot of help! Thanks, especially for the image flipping tip!

But one question, what would be the consequences if I were to just block/ignore him after receiving the money? Could he possibly get the money back? Or would there be any kind of backlash from this?

Help from anyone would be great right now! Thanks.

BBanks - September 23, 2015, 3:59 am

(Sep 23, 2015 03:54 AM)Actress Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) Of course. There's always a possibility that he's going to chargeback, this is something you have no control over.

The best case scenario would be that you provide all of the information he's requested of you and you commit to seeing him and "can't find him."

Of course we both know you're not going to be on that flight - but he'll find comfort in knowing you are, which means he's less likely to chargeback.

An even better tip - schedule the flight a month ahead. So say a month from now. If he sent the money today, it'd be thirty days (gives him 15 days to chargeback).

This can give you a better chance of convincing him you're flying back. This entire method would take a great deal of planning/executing properly with social engineering.

Ahh great information, that's very helpful! I will take major note of all of these posts! Thanks guys ?

Vigor - September 23, 2015, 4:38 am

Just so you know there's just about a 99.9% chance he isn't going to pay for shit.

Optimized - September 23, 2015, 8:16 am

He is 9 times out of 10 not going to go through with the payment, if you want to be cheeky, you can try get him to send the money rather than he pays for them! Has he paid you before? If so he may be serious, else he probably isn't. Unfortunately if you try to cash out this plane ticket, you will not be getting any AGC!

Thanks,

Say your brother works for a flight agency and you can get a really good price on the ticket if you pay your brother.

LilHackers - September 23, 2015, 6:54 pm

If he didn't have you already then just block him. If he did then just ask him to send the money to your account, instead of him paying for it. Take it and ruuuuuun!

Norman Bates - September 23, 2015, 8:46 pm

Or instead of sending you the cash, he can actually buy a plane ticket if he is more comfortable doing that.

Then just sell the ticket.

Maybe someone wants to travel there

Yarumasi - September 23, 2015, 9:44 pm

Just keep talking with him and see where it goes, if its obvious hes a time waster, you know where the block button is :)

This wouldn't be easy, it'd be much more practical to cash out by having him send the money through some other medium.

Jaebird - September 24, 2015, 10:51 pm

Butter-up lol. Don't forget he still thinks you're a chick and that he's going to woo the shit out of you. He's one of those sad lonely types who mass-inboxes every girl he can find on FB going "hw r u" "am lonely" "tlk 2 me dear."

Get the fuck out of there.
