

Forum:Hack Forums

Thread: A Community to Create

Creator. - October 6, 2015, 11:01 pm

So I really want to create a lot of things, I have a lot of ideas but I am a designer. I am someone who manages aesthetic and I can coordinate how the project is going but with low execution skills(in terms of programming). But I know a bit of Bootstrap for Front-End development and a little Java and C. But that isn't enough, is it?

I was thinking why not create something where people can collaborate with like minded people around the world and be able to execute what they want without thinking of the limits of possibilities.

I am pretty sure you would have hit a roadblock once in your life where you needed a partner in crime because you know you do not have the skill to execute something you want to. Exactly why I want to do something around this. For now create a group on Skype where I can get people of different abilities to execute something that would make world a better place by solving problems. How Anonymous is a community(not exactly an apt example but you catch my drift right?)

If anyone is slightly interested in helping me out, message me or feel free to add me on skype - its.cow

So if you are worried about getting paid, I really don't have the money right now. But this is a passion project and I want a community of likeminded people to be a part of it. Because I have always learnt one thing, if you do what you are good at and strive for excellence then success will run behind you.

Genicus - October 6, 2015, 11:05 pm

Rule one of business, Do not post your ideas in the open for feedback, If I see a good idea in the open I wont stay a word and steal it right from under you.

Creator. - October 6, 2015, 11:07 pm

(Oct 6, 2015 11:05 PM)Genicus Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) Rule one of business, Do not post your ideas in the open for feedback, If I see a good idea in the open I wont stay a word and steal it right from under you.

Honestly this isn't even the idea.

Genicus - October 6, 2015, 11:10 pm

(Oct 6, 2015 11:07 PM)Cow. Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) Honestly this isn't even the idea.

"I was thinking why not create something where people can collaborate with like minded people around the world and be able to execute what they want without thinking of the limits of possibilities. " Is all it takes for someone to get a idea of how to do it and do it before you.

Its a rough world out here, its dog eat dog, get close to people you can work with and really just sit down and work, dont make excuses just pick a project and see it though. 100 projects might fail, and the stupidest side project will make you. Find a problem, and fix the problem in a way that hasnt been done before.

Hexicidal - October 7, 2015, 12:50 am

I thought you were Crow for some reason, and I thought he was back.

