You must truly value your designs if you find the need to watermark things you're simply showcasing.

Can't tell if that is a positive or negative reply but hey, i had it happen before that people steal work so what is 10 seconds of adding a watermark ;)

Is there another name for stuff like this? I want to learn how or at least see more...

We call them "smudges", PM me if you want to take a look at my site to see my other two smudges.

Edit: After you get 20 posts.

The underlining message was a cheap shot at your artistic skill.

You're too paranoid with the watermark. It's so distracting I can't even see properly whats under it.

Anyways, the smudge is almost nowhere to be seen. If it's that blur in the background, then it needs more definition.

There's no flow or composition in the sig, subject makes no sense and overall, is weak.

2/10 - no one's going to want to steal your sig.

Prophet Banana - October 8, 2015, 7:09 pm

On top of what cortz said, I'd only place watermarks if I plan to sell the design and or also give commercial use to buyer.

Fair enough, and Cortz thanks for your feedback i agree on this, my second smudge was more of a smudge, this is indeed not a "smudge".

Never take this guy seriously.

I once asked Intelligent Sin if he listens to 50 Cent. He proceeded to open up his wallet, take out 50 cents and placed the two quarters in his left and right ears. He then said "I can't hear anything?!".

Lmao, a watermark? Are you serious?

First of all, don't be so vain to think that your artwork is worth anything to anyone else.

Secondly, even if someone did steal it, for a piece like that, you should be honored.

Thirdly, the contrast, depth and flow are all bad.

Finally, on such a small piece, using such an obnoxiously visual watermark makes it look even uglier than it already is.

QTF, personally it's more like a 1/10 and that 1 point comes from the fact that it exists at all.
