Ok so after an issue with HackersEducation.org (Our static website) we had to recreate it so we added something else. We added a forum.

The forum will host a tone of educational content, and be the one place stop for knowledge. Currently there is a giveaway for a group and we will be handing our awards. The site is purely educational based and covering a wide range of topics. If you want more added just let us know.

No, and I don't plan to as 99% of the startup forums that have threads on HF die within a few months.

Though I could see this one going a bit further as you enslave your group members to make tutorials/guides. I understand you guys are just trying to be "HQ" but it's almost scary to see how much content you push out(most which could have been googled anyways, but I do appreciate effort).

I only commented because of the IQ points I lost after reading the comment I originally quoted.
