

Forum:Hack Forums

Thread: I'm pretty sure I have some sort of virus

UntoldMythical - October 13, 2015, 5:07 pm

Task manager stopped working properly a while ago, and I've just been using Process Hacker. Process hacker stopped working today and any programs that stop responding are impossible to kill. I have been having internet outages for half a min every day. I have too much stuff on this PC, and I really don't feel like wiping it and installing a whole new copy of Windows on it.

Any help would be appreciated.

n0600d - October 13, 2015, 5:48 pm

Back up what you dont want to lose and install linux would be what I would do! You can try Malwarebytes! It has worked for me in the past on windows machines!

occupi - October 13, 2015, 5:59 pm

It's probably salvageable but beware that without a full wipe you won't know for sure if you're still back doored.

If it's a rat from here you can most likely clean it with Combofix or Adwcleaner. I'm sure a more senior member will be along shortly to help.

Fezziwig5 - October 13, 2015, 7:02 pm

yeah i get those internet outages everyday from what i assume is a virus (not bad internet or dos)

Freebooter - October 13, 2015, 10:42 pm

First scan Windows with RKill then TDSSKiller, MalwareBytes and HitmanPro. Open Command Prompt as a administrator and type Sfc /scannow command to repair any damage Windows system files.

UntoldMythical - October 14, 2015, 9:17 am

(Oct 13, 2015 05:48 PM)n0600d Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) Back up what you dont want to lose and install linux would be what I would do!

You can try Malwarebytes! It has worked for me in the past on windows machines! I got Malwarebytes and Avast, didn't pick up anything.

Freebooter - October 15, 2015, 3:28 am

Open Command Prompt as a administrator by typing cmd into Start Menu search box.

Type Sfc /scannow command and press Enter key to repair any Windows system files. Report back here with scan result output. Type Chkdsk C: /r command and press enter key to schedule a next time reboot disk error checking.