

Forum:Hack Forums

Thread: Marketplace Product Review

Jordana Brewster - October 18, 2015, 5:02 pm

Hi,

Obviously the possibility of trying to implement this might be hard I would assume, but the marketplace would benefit maybe from a genuine purchase review section.

So on a thread in the marketplace section. You can have the ability to see confirmed purchases. With the number of start up payment processing platforms owned and run on HF maybe there could be some API confirmation gateway or something.

Either that, or proof of purchase type of system. Where those sellers who are interested in feedback from genuine purchased users they could generate codes on the purchase receipt that could be accepted on the product review page?

I think this would save the uncertainty with fake reviews and so on and cut the bs out of threads especially for those members who are just looking for honest opinion from those who actually bought the service.

Obviously this might be hard to implement, but it might be a good idea?

Wirt - October 18, 2015, 5:04 pm

Omniscient already has a vouch system in the works. You might want to wait for that to release to see if it doesn't include this.

Jokes - October 18, 2015, 5:05 pm

Quote:So on a thread in the marketplace section. You can have the ability to see confirmed purchases.

The only way to fully confirm the purchase would require omni to have access to the PayPal/btc account that the money was sent to.

Although I think this would be very cool, it would be next to impossible to implement.