Thread: Ratatouille Downloader, Dynamic API Loading, UD, C++

Wardow - November 10, 2015, 1:37 pm

Hey buddies, i'm sharing the source to Ratatouille Downloader as it's not longer selling, this one is almost fud and has pretty nice runtime result, so enjoy it.

Language: C++

Download Link: <https://www.sendspace.com/file/bqutzf>

What? Seriously? This is the worst piece of "production" code I have ever seen. If you're going to release something, at least make it worth while for the people going to download and review your code.

It's shit mate. The code is shit. It's just one giant overhead for UrlDownloadToFile. you could easily make an "FUD" downloader, using regular sockets or even a better chance with WinInet. What was the point of all this?

The size would be a lot higher if i were using sockets or wininet, less api calls == better.

Well, this downloader works? what's wrong with it? there is almost only skids on HF, and basicly this type of code, is what everyone is selling on HF right now, as for C++ downloader and .NET ones, it's just all cancer, i never said mine was a lot better, and i did not bothered using sockets because i don't see the point while you can use that single function and do the same thing..

also that's common sense, less line of codes, less size.. (in most cases)

The point of all this, was also to show off how easy is to make all those "FileDroppers" or "Downloaders" that people sell on the market currently, that's just cancer, it's so simple that people shouldnt sell this but everyone wants to make quick bucks..
