matevos06 - November 14, 2015, 4:41 am

Hello, there are some RAT's on the market and Im wondering about which to buy. Can you tell me your experience with some of them? Which works better and is more stable in your opinion? Thanks.

Don't recommend a rat for their support lol...
Who needs support using a simple tool anyways.

Good luck using a RAT with no support what-so-ever.
The majority of people do not understand every single feature in a RAT. LuminosityLink especially.

OSCelestial2 is coded in Java, and works on multiple operating systems like Linux,Windows, and Mac. You can control all of these using OSC RAT. It is 100% FUD (always), so no crypter is needed. It is highly stable and I suggest it if you plan on accessing many different OS.

It is updated very frequently as well.

You said you no longer sale NC why are you promoting it ? And why would you think LL or IM4 is used for illegal stuff? You said HF was not known for that I'm using Imminent Monitor 4.

NanoCore is the best Rat tool in HF for me with(Plugins) !
