

Forum:Hack Forums

Thread: Reset any gmail account // gmail form exploit

underprop - November 17, 2015, 8:40 pm

How to basically reset any Gmail..

Things you need for the process to go through if you know the creation date of the gmail, Alt email on file. Make sure your IP Address doesn't change 24/7 or no VPN's and the account cannot have two-step on it. It'll take up to 12-24 hours to process your IP with the account. NOTE (some accounts this doesn't work)

1. First thing go to google.com/accounts/recovery/ click "I dont know my password" enter the victims email
2. Enter the characters
3. When you get on the screen where it says "It is highly recommended that you reset your password using a device you signed in from recently." it wants you to enter the last password just ignore that, click the "i don't know" button.
4. Next thing that pops up will be it'll say enter the alt Phone number or Email address on file, but just click at the bottom of the continue button click the blue highlighted words.
5. It'll take you to the google account form page just enter your contact email "any email you have access too" click continue
6. This next page will be last time you were able to login put could of recent date or if inactive try to just guess a date, but on the "when was your account created?" try to get that correct it will speed up the process works 100% of the time click click continue but If it ask for an secret question just press skip.
7. Next page you will enter the Alt email if you know it where it says "What's the first recovery email address you remember?" click click continue
8. On this next page it'll say "Google products you use" click gmail and put the creation date when it was created again
9. Then click submit. All done
10. Just wait up to 12-24 hours and go to the recovery page again and enter the victims email, if it worked the message "It is highly recommended that you reset your password using a device you signed in from recently." Won't be there and if that message is then it didn't work. Just make sure you wait 12-24 hours, make sure you know the creation date, and alt email. Once all done fill the form out again and put same contact email once completed you'll get a email from google with password reset link.

yourmomhatesme - November 17, 2015, 8:42 pm

this is a total waste of time lol not even worth sending here for ppl to read lol @thiscrap

Queen Cin - November 17, 2015, 8:43 pm

Can someone vouch for this, does this really work?

underprop - November 17, 2015, 8:45 pm

(Nov 17, 2015 09:42 PM)yourmomhatesme Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) this is a total waste of time lol not even worth sending here for ppl to read lol @thiscrap

lol, it's a simple bug/exploit in gmail... It registers your IP with the gmail so you can reset it.. lol epik83 - November 20, 2015, 9:27 am anyway of spoofing the persons IP address so when you do submit the recovery it believes its coming from the actual user? I know the security question and a few emails theyve kept in contact with and the last time they logged on. Its just the created date and the ip that is incorrect not allowing to reset the password.

jackharper - November 20, 2015, 9:31 am

(Nov 20, 2015 10:27 AM)epik83 Wrote: CITE anyway of spoofing the persons IP address so when you do submit the recovery it believes its coming from the actual user? I know the security question and a few emails theyve kept in contact with and the last time they logged on. Its just the created date and the ip that is incorrect not allowing to reset the password.

Spoofing your IP as victims !

Thats just a theoretical solution..

Practically that is not possible, you can't even log into gmail with a proxy ON..

Just my thoughts....

NetLabz - April 14, 2025, 1:27 am so then how do we get into the Gmail