Thread: Programming Undetection Book \(Refuding\)

Wardow - November 25, 2015, 10:52 am

Hello, i was thinking to make a Book about programming undetection and how all that works, including an index of each detection type and their meaning, do you guys would be interested?

Note: If you vote, please post below how you would use that knowledge.

Alex™ - November 25, 2015, 10:53 am

I submitted my vote, hope you take it into account, Wardrobe!

It's actually Weirdo.

Is this going to be a free release to better inform the community, or something to give you monetary gain? Just curious, Wardon't.

If it's ever released for free, the whole Crypter market is definitely dead for sure.

I'm going to make a real book, like hardcopy.

Seeing as this thread is in the Marketplace and he himself selling a crypter, I come to the only logical conclusion that this will be for monetary gain.

Why don't you do that then? It would fit you very well.

You enjoy making things burn and being a bitch anyways. ?

Well, hiring someone to code a FileDropper and selling it for insane price isnt the type of business you should be proud of, i've always been a legit person by nature.

Before I decide to vote, what language would that be in?

It would be cross language, and cross platform aswell, it's a global knowledge of it.

English of course. I don't see why it would be in any other language.

I voted yes. Not because i want to know the material, but because i want to see the mind of wardow.

eCoLoGy - November 25, 2015, 6:03 pm

I voted NO!

Don't want to see perdown leaking everything I thought him. ?

No please stop lying bro.

Who thought you all the strategy behind AOE II? ?

For that yes, but not for programming undetection methods!

debug - November 25, 2015, 7:07 pm

Vouch for Wardow, his crypter is the best on the market and you don't have to worry about the feds!

Oh, Wardow owns DataProtector?

Cool.

I kid, I don't use crypters

I doubt this will have any impact to the crypter market.

I'd pay a couple bucks to learn a little bit more... Good idea OP!

I use crypter to hide my bytecode exe from decompilation/unpack.

So why should I learn and sell a crypter??

Zyklon A - November 26, 2015, 1:24 am

I would say no. In my opinion you will just waste your time writing and explaining that. If a person wants to learn how crypters work and how to bypass AV detections I am sure that there is a lot of material on the internet.
