

Forum: Hack Forums

Thread: False Claims

????g ?!?? - November 25, 2015, 4:20 pm

Are you allowed to say someone post infected content or is a multi without solid proof? I feel like this is retarded you can just go around saying shits infected without proof thanks,

Tyranus. - November 25, 2015, 4:20 pm

I don't believe there's any rule against it. The only time you can't say something without proof is if you're calling someone a scammer.

Arcturus Mengsk - November 25, 2015, 4:43 pm

How about you just upload your files to <https://www.virustotal.com/> .

If they are truly clean files, you should be fine to post results and the stub.

King of Hearts - November 25, 2015, 5:14 pm

Members have been posting warning others that a user might be a multi or that a member might be infecting others without proof for quite some time now.

There isn't a rule against that. As always, it's expected that members be mindful of what they download off of the internet. Nonetheless, if a user is infecting members, he can be warned/banned/closed.

Protecting Yourself From HF and Members Help Document