Thread: Scammed by Abide | uid=1698590 | 35\$

SIM-2830142 - November 26, 2015, 10:22 pm

I just got scammed by Adibe

I am late for work because of this motherfucker.

He wanted to buy my account for 35$. This video should explain all, i started recording when i knew i was being scammed.

He tried to bullshit me, but here is me with my live proof. It's 5 minutes long.

[Video: <https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=loyswBNIHag&feature=youtu.be>]

I accidentally gave the wrong id on the video, he renamed the account to youngrichniggaz posted this on my thread and ignored me. (Click to View)

TL:DR: (All the proof should be in the video)

I gave him details. He changed password for steam and mail. Said he was lagging. Told me that account credentials were wrong. Im getting notified that the password was changed (in the video) so i couldnt login. You can't change a steam password without email access. Blocked me, changed the steam id but i found it from my trade offer history. Just got scammed for 35$....

Can't blame someone trying to profit, the point is Abide scammed him

Not gonna post on this thread. This is what happened.

First off, the email was an @mail account which was not secured and I could not change the password on the email or anything.

Second, after reading the account comments and checking recent games, it was clearly cheated/hacked on and was likely to be OW'd.

Third, after "not being fast enough" to figure out the situation with the account the email kicked me off saying the email password was changed. And then shortly after steam kicked me off as well saying the password was changed. TLDR, he tried to rip me off and when I questioned him pulled it back and now is saying I "scammed" him when I don't even have access to the account or email anymore.

Live proof declines everything. Stop lying

Also i think i have one of the previous game recorded played with the account

Also it doesnt mean that you can steal it.

You cant even change a password without the email.
