Frequently Asked Questions

Why would I need this software?

Do you have a VPN or proxy but still don't feel secure?

Accessing Tor?

Downloading torrents?
Travel a lot?
Accessing public Wi-Fi?
Absolution will deliver where all are lacking.

Q: How does the kill switch function? Why does this help?

A: Applications added here will be automatically closed during a VPN or general network failure. This will attempt to stop any leakage of your DNS by communicating software and other services, acting as a superior first line of defense.

Q: Why is my MAC address important?

A: Virtually every OS on the market today is capable of communicating over Ethernet networks and has the ability to set the MAC address of its NIC. The default MAC address of a NIC, in most cases, is "burned" into the card, but that address can be overridden by software. It is unfortunately not known or common knowledge that your MAC address can be changed or set. Many users are using the manufacturer's hard-coded MAC address by default, never having changed it.

Q: Why do you need to change your MAC address?

A: Well, a very important reason is privacy. Just like an IP address is your ID on the internet, a MAC address is your ID on the local Ethernet network. Recently, as the rise of mobile networks, with Wi-Fi & Bluetooth hotspots everywhere, the privacy implications of MAC address tracking have been the subject of increasing debate.

You can visit the following links for more information;

<http://www.wired.com/2014/08/edward-snowden/>

<http://destroyadware.com/internet-privacy-software-reviews/why-and-how-to-change-mac-address/>

Q: Why is my Hostname important?

A: This name, just like your computer name are given to you by your computer manufacturer or set by yourself during installation of your OS. This information can be personally revealing, as most people like to personally name their computers to make it all the more your own. Unfortunately, a computer name such as John-PC or Mike-Home can narrow down an attackers search, or enlighten them to further attack such as blackmail or being 'doxed'.

You may visit the following links for more information;

<http://whatismyipaddress.com/hostname>

Q: Why is my Computer name important?

A: For the same reason as your Hostname, privacy is of the essence here. There are numerous exploits and normal everyday functions on the web today that will attempt to grab your computer name or hostname's to personalize their content towards you, possibly even greeting you by the name of your computer on your next return. These bits of personally identifiable information can add up quickly and assist attackers or marketing and advertisement firms from building a digital fingerprint of your computer and the user using it.

Q: Why is my NetBIOS important?

A: A computer's NetBIOS name is more often than not, the exact same as the computer's Hostname, though it does not by any means have to. When a computer is started, various services (such as the server service or the workstation service) register a unique NetBIOS name based on the computer name. As with the hostname, this information can be supplemented to assist in building a computer's digital fingerprint.

<http://www.tech-faq.com/netbios-names.html>

Q: What is the VPN Detection option for?

A: This will simply check for connected VPN adapters on your network to identify whether you are connected to a VPN or not. This process will aid in serving you content such as DNS servers, adding websites to your exclusion lists, and more. You may also find a ping function to allow you to test the speed of how long your network takes to communicate between a website.

Q: What is the VPN Bypass option for?

A: Frequently I have seen it asked online; "How can I visit 'x' site whilst connected to a VPN, but using my regular IP address instead?"

This is a very handy feature that allows for users to visit a website that they may be blocked or banned from accessing on their VPN server. With this feature, Websites get resolved to their IP addresses, and then are simply re-routed from your VPN IP address towards your main connection IP address instead.

Q: What is the DNS Leak Fix option for?

A: Your ISP provides you with a DNS server that is automatically configured on your router, which in turn applies this ISP owned DNS server to any device connected to your network. Your ISP's DNS server can be restored at any time by logging into your authorized router or modem device.

This feature will grant you access to 5 premium DNS servers that have been included with the software to offer greater diversity and functionality. You may also choose to set your own DNS servers. Using DNS servers has many different reasons and their own set of pro's and con's, but the main purpose is that they can ultimately serve different uses. Some DNS servers are set up specifically to help block spam or ads, while others may block pornography and other gray-areas of the web entirely! Depending on the DNS servers used, generally network speeds can increase or decrease, with or without added functionality.

Q: What is the Quick Repair option for?

A: Quick Repair will, as it says, quickly use the Windows based diagnostic tools in the background to reset and flush your network connection. This can be used to troubleshoot problems such as a DNS server failure, VPN server failure, or a temporary weakness or drop in signal.

Q: What's with the Install/Uninstall Win TAP?!

A: Don't be alarmed. These drivers are essential when connecting to most VPN's using the OpenVPN protocol - so you might even have this already. You will not need to use these options unless something seems to be wrong with your VPN client or configuration files. This can happen for a number of reasons, including recently installed software and updates. Whilst this option will provide you with the latest TAP drivers, it is often best to do a complete uninstall, removing traces of the OpenVPN software and rebooting before proceeding to reinstall OpenVPN.

Q: What is the Disable WebRTC option for?

A: WebRTC is a designed protocol online that has served to provide support for real-time and browser-to-browser applications for voice calling, video chat, P2P file sharing and other services. Specifically, when behind a VPN service, WebRTC has a habit of revealing the users actual IP address. A quick-fix solution, WebRTC block will take effect on as many browsers as possible.

Q: What is the Clear System Logs option for?

A: These are logs that are created by your system for diagnostic, administrative and security purposes. Most machines will never have cleared this information, leaving logs back from day 1 of installation, or your purchase date. In establishing a digital fingerprint, these logs would prove that you installed specific software, performed actions, experienced software or network crashes, BSOD's, error codes and other information. For what exactly can be determined from these logs, feel free to check out your "Event Viewer".

Q: What are the main settings for?

A: This page will allow you to use the Machine tab automatically, every time your computer starts. This will ensure that you have the most secure possible experience, by using a new ID (Hostname, Computer name, NetBIOS and MAC) to give the user the anonymity they deserve.

Q: What is the chart for, and what is it monitoring?

A: This graph has been designed to display and monitor the bandwidth flow through your connected network. With monitoring, you are able to determine how much data is being used up each day, week or month. This is particularly useful for customers with ISP's that restrict their bandwidth to a monthly limit, monitoring their bandwidth will allow the user to pace themselves or keep from going over - and spending more money on their bill than they need to.

Q: What are the Main Settings for?

A: These settings will allow the user to automate their task, having a new computer ID (MAC address, Hostname, Computer name, and NetBIOS) randomized each time the computer starts up, giving you a superb line of defense by changing this vital and private information. Your computer ID is extremely important to privacy; and security. Wi-Fi attackers will need your MAC address and other information to perform their attacks correctly and efficiently. This combination of security improvements makes it a lot harder, if not impossible, to efficiently gain access to your network or machine.

Q: What are the 6 layers of anonymity?

A:
1'st Layer: The Kill Switch will eliminate any processes and communication services that are leaking or revealing unspecified or unintentional information, acting as a superior first line of defence.

2'nd Layer: Consider it this way, "No MAC, no communications". With the MAC address module you have the ability to set a specific address, or to completely randomize it instead.

3'rd Layer: A host name is a Fully Qualified Domain Name (FQDN) which provides your computer with a unique name. Through various advanced HTTPS exploits and Man-in-the-Middle (MITM) attacks, your computer's hostname can be left exposed to attackers or eavesdroppers, allowing them to establish your digital-fingerprint.

<https://security.stackexchange.com/questions/73605/with-https-what-information-would-a-mitm-attacker-be-able-to-glean>

4'th Layer: Your computer name is just that; a computer name. You most likely named it "John", "Work", "Home" or something similar when first setting up your computer. Many various services and websites gather this data to personalize services and cater advertisements towards you. Not to mention any sneaky malware is another reason to keep a strong computer name, as an attacker could only have to look at their list of victims to identify you by name.

5'th Layer: NetBIOS was designed in the early 1980's to allow specific applications to have the capability to communicate over a network. NetBIOS provides support for the following services; Network name registration and verification, Session establishment and termination, Reliable connection-oriented session data transfer, Unreliable connectionless datagram data transfer, and protocol and adapter monitoring management.

6'th Layer: A good DNS server supports both high performance and reliability. Especially on high-traffic networks, DNS servers must handle a significant load of name and address look-ups to support Web browsing, email and other usages. They can include more specific uses such as filtering spam, blocking specific websites or just trying to get the best speeds possible from your network.

So far the program is working really well.

All features work.

My favorite one so far is definitely the DNS leak protection.

Very simplistic and easy to use.

? Would highly recommend this. ?

So this is a vpn client with some nice features attached and there's options to whitelist certain websites so the vpn will be disabled for it?

And also, are you able to do this with whole programs? Like force only some applications to use the vpn but not all?

If that is how it is, I'd instabuy this. Cause I realistically only need a vpn for skype and browsing the web, not when Im playing games like league or csgo. Haha

It is not a VPN, however it provides some tools and services.

Included with is all the options you mentioned and more. Maintaining privacy is a tall order and this program tries to do just that.

You do not need a VPN to use the software but it would help.

Yes sorry, I meant to add that it is not a VPN client. The similarity to any clients may be distinguished by the additional settings and features such as the privacy based tools.

No, you may add any program you wish that if the network goes down or offline, it will automatically close that program to prevent any unwanted leak of information.

R.I.P - December 6, 2015, 12:21 am

I read through all the info about the product, but I have a few questions and suggestions.

Is there a way with your program to disable the VPN for specific programs and applications, or is this feature only for websites? (IE, when playing games online a VPN would only cause problems, but I'd need it for most everything else)

Also, you mention: "You may also choose to set your own DNS servers. Using DNS servers has many different reasons and their own set of pro's and con's, but the main purpose is that they can ultimately serve different uses." You list a few examples of what DNS servers can do, but can you elaborate a bit more in how this can help with anonymity and privacy?

This program looks very unique and definitely something I'd want, but I'm a bit hesitant because I feel that I can do most of this stuff myself in not a whole lot of time. Have you considered adding anymore features to delete the digital footprint, like maybe something to destroy metadata from files, an option to clear other logs saved in the PC, maybe options that allow one to monitor his internet connection and some features involving that? Maybe something to destroy cookies, logs, and potentially identifiable information on popular web browsers like Firefox and Chrome. Also, the features CCleaner has would do really well included in your program to centralize everything, like the ability to wipe free space and that sort of thing.

You could expand not only within anonymity and privacy, but even to security and anti-forensics and branch out more in that direction. You could probably sell this for a lot more if you included some helpful security measures, like some sort of quick nuke option to completely nuke the contents of a drive or drives or render it impossible to read (there are viruses and ransomware that do this, but it would be a really neat feature to have an option to do it oneself). Or an option to lock the computer so that you can't type, use the mouse or anything unless some sort of hotkey is pressed.

Anyway, I really like the concept of this program and it seems useful. It could be even more powerful though and with even more layers. It seems like the 3rd to 5th layers are pretty much the same thing, that is, changing the identifiable names of your online identity, so it's more like 3 layers. It's still very useful and a really good price for what it offers, but it could be even more powerful if you expanded a bit (and you could sell it for a whole lot more as a result, too).

Sounds like a great product, good luck with sales.

Hi there,
Thanks for your questions!

At the moment, the program will route websites away from your VPN connection by using their resolved IP addresses. I'm not exactly sure at the moment if it's possible to do this with specific files, however I am sure I can look into this, as it seems to elaborate nicely on the idea.

The DNS servers I have included with the software all carry their own specific pro's and con's, just like all DNS servers. Typically, some notable features of a DNS features would be any settings that the provider has set up on them, such as adblocking filters, pornography filters, or updated pee-ach-ishing (web fishing) databases. There are many other uses towards DNS servers, but just like connecting to a proxy or VPN, they have the ability to either slow or boost your speeds.

The program is definitely unique. I've spent over 9 months researching and putting together what I believe is essential and very helpful with preventing unnecessary leakage of information. Within limitations and certain boundaries, there are many logs and system activity information that will be masked by Absolution. The tools I've chosen to implement into the software have been programmed from scratch - from the ground up and have been tested thoroughly on multiple systems. That all being said and done - I am nowhere complete with this program. I realize that without community, this type of software is nothing. It is the customer that knows what they want. It is up to me to adapt and deliver. I expect many months of updates and upgrades to this software, as really I think the sky is the limit. With your considerations in mind, I have much more planned already too.

I believe having an option to nuke any drives on the software would be horrendous - this is HackForums after all, and unfortunately not all customers are completely tech-savvy or capable of reading before clicking. I like those options, and I will consider adding some sort of implementation towards some type of those features.

Elaborating on the research phase of the project was realization of the digital fingerprint. Much like a human fingerprint and it's animal counter-parts, every print is unique. I believe that it is extremely important to think about how such a fingerprint may be compiled, and how each piece of matching material only adds up to the evidence or intel compiled. That being said, there is work to be done still, and I will be keeping up.

I would appreciate you taking the leap of faith if you are interested, and there is nothing to lose at a price of only $9.99.

I have some very cool updates planned and of course, hearing feedback is essential to running a prompt and successful business.

Thanks for your input,

NoodleBot™

Edit: Also just wanted to add that the program does infact monitor the bandwidth usage, as well as clearing logs, which are some of the ideas you mentioned.

Of course, and that's a misconception out there that is highly abused and underestimated.

Nothing will ever be 100% fool proof, but as with all other methods of anonymity and privacy, when used in conjunction with other services they provide a highly secure environment.

The software also has tools that would assist in general everyday usage.

Edit: Also just wanted to add that the program does infact monitor the bandwidth usage, as well as clearing logs, which are some of the ideas you mentioned. I would like to add on to what the previous user said, regarding other features.

Removing things such as metadata, fingerprints\canvas finger prints, UserAgent spoofing, Mac Address Changer, Disable WebRTC, and other things, ut importantly for me is the EXTRACTION of cache\cookies, and not just the deletion of them. That way I can use web browser, have a firefox profile, do what I want on it, and extract the profile fully, along with cache and cookies. For the useragents spoofing you should take a quick search and find the leaked FraudFox software. I have a good version of it, it's very sought after and used.

Maybe I'm saying things that can get too complicated for you. After all you said this is for Hackforums, so I might just be dreaming here.

Yeah, most of these features are already functioning or are already planned as updates. With time, this program will gather more and more.

I thank you for the comment though.

I hope to be delivering a few important updates this week, as well as general improvements to the program.

Unfortunately I have to stress that I did not build this program with Windows 8 nor 10 in mind.

I find that any work done to the systems would just be a waste of time to begin with. Anyone consciously aware and searching for anonymity or privacy of any sort should not be using Windows 8 or 10.

Technically speaking it's just a more familiar operating system to most people, therefore with the average person looking for privacy the techniques are a little more well known then compared to what is still being discovered in the newer.

As technology grows the methods and technologies used to gather this information can obviously be updated take more aggressive methods.

I wouldn't limit this statement to Windows 8 or 10. If someone's actively pursuing privacy and anonymity, Linux clearly is the best choice by leaps and bounds. Sure, Windows 8 may be worse than Windows 7 for privacy/anonymity, but they're both awful for it as a whole.

The program has some known issues on Windows 8.1 - because I never designed the program for 8.1 usage. However, I will be addressing this issue for customers using Windows 8.1 in the next handful of updates.

This software contains a handful of resources and anti-fingerprinting techniques, that if used properly and with/without the conjunction of other services (Such as your favorite VPN or proxy servers) can greatly benefit to provide a greater personal security setup.

If you'd like more information, please check the FAQ's, or simply message me for any help.

Just purchased the Tool and its the little puzzle piece I missed. ;)

Some tiny tasks can be done with this tool.

Im running on Win10 x64 and it runs very good.

I have some cool ideas to implement into this Tool:

- IP / Anonymity Check: IP Address Check, WebRTC, Java, etc
- For Network Tools: Choose the Network Interface for the changes to apply (e.g. Wlan-Adapter or Built-In LAN)
- Minimize into Tray

Fixes:

- I got many Icons from Absolution in my Systray while running it. It looks very messi.
- The connection Speed in the Chart doesnt show the correct value.

Very thanks for this Tool! :)

Hey there thanks for purchasing.

I can't help but notice that you were using windows 10. Unfortunately there will be a lot of bugs and problems with the software on windows 10. I have however designed this program to be run perfectly under conditions of Windows XP, Windows Vista and Windows 7.

The problems you reported are not present on those operating systems. If you have a copy of Windows or another machine please feel free to try running the software there instead to maximize the potential.

Updates coming soon will address a handful of improvements to stability as well as addressing some new features.

Thanks for the comment! I believe that at the least, the efforts included in this program will promote a new standard of security for your personal machine. If used properly, it is nearly impossible to prove ownership of any activity or files, as well as provide security updates towards critical information-leaking risks.

I will constantly be updating this program to be reflecting current times and technological changes.

Some users with Windows 10 have reported small but fatal issues with the killswitch, which is caused by the change of process identification and monitoring on the newer systems.

I cannot at the moment guarantee anything with Windows 8 because it is not designed for it, however if you feel it is not meeting your needs if limited I would gladly offer a refund. Another alternative, would be simply to use Windows Xp/Vista/7 if possible.

Thanks for purchasing. The saving issue has been fixed and will be released in a new update very shortly.

For the best performance, I have to suggest using windows XP, Vista, or seven. This is due partly to the fact that I have not anticipated customers using windows eight and windows 10 with this type of software (privacy).

NoodleBot™ - January 4, 2016, 10:16 pm

Hope everyone is enjoying a safe and happy New Years so far.

Unfortunately my father has been in bad shape and health for the past couple years, but most excruciatingly over the past couple of months. Going from walking and talking, to stumbling and falling and no longer speaking or responding he was a shell of a man in pain and agony. Today, as a very emotional family decision we decided to remove the life support. He was not going to get any better and the life support system was only prolonging suffering longer then it needed to be.

I never thought I would have to ask on this forum, or with any product or business I might be associated with, but me and my family would be appreciative to have your support and patience. I created this project with privacy in mind - and don't think I will forget what I set out to do. More and more now I feel like I need to contribute something to this planet before my time is up. I hope that this project can fulfill my need for serving an growing community and giving you something that actually works and does what it says it will.

This has been a very tough and busy few months for me, and I appreciate those that I informed of this situation already for giving me their best wishes and patience. Some things just cannot be planned or anticipated.

My father was unable to respond and our power of attorney will not give us access to the last of my fathers funds, which we are in need of to pay for the funeral expenses, and continue paying for the house we live in with one less income maker providing for us.

Many of you have the luxury of being able to spend money where and when you please, unfortunately with such a small family we are all going to be stuck on penny pinching as much as we can the following years. If anyone is ABLE and WILLING to donate, please consider that even $5-10 could mean the difference between putting food on the table or not. Don't try to donate to me if you can't. Everyone's situation is different and for all I know you could be as strapped for cash as we are.

Please message me if you would like to donate and I will try to provide several options depending on your comfortability.

Again I am sorry to ask but I require your patience before I can resume development on Absolution. I have some updates already created but I need time to publish them.

I'll update this thread as soon as I have any more news.

An update containing a few small fixes will be released tomorrow.

The fixes for the icon in the taskbar area being fixed to no longer spawn a bunch of icons and spam up your taskbar, as well as the killswitch and DNS settings saving your settings.

Thanks for bearing with me. I will have this work out as soon as possible.

NoodleBot™ - January 25, 2016, 11:53 pm

I have some big updates coming, along with one I will be aiming to push out for Friday - including up to 5-10 more DNS servers.

Particularly for the privacy section of the software, I believe that when more people begin to use it, it's strength will grow, as it will be much harder to associate random bits of information to track you (or open up some wiggle room for "plausible deniability" if worst case scenario) then it would be using your own personal information everyday.

Default mac, hostname etc.

EDIT: software frozen, and i got a Blue screen of death. I had to restore my computer as there was no way to restart, always getting the BD

NoodleBot™ - January 28, 2016, 11:02 am

Hi there,

There is an option to load your back up however you could also simply change the name back to their original.

The blue screen issue sounds pretty coincidental. I would try to make sure that this is not another issue?

Would it be possible for you to run this fingerprinting test before and after using your software and post full results?

<https://panopticlick.eff.org/>

NoodleBot™ - January 30, 2016, 4:49 pm

No, I will not post for you my fingerprint. That defies all common sense here, IMO. Same as submitting your fingerprint for analysis.

Moving on, Panopticlick is just a demonstration on how web browser data may be aggregated to profiles. While there are numerous "fingerprint" testing services online, some are obviously more and less effective then others.

Using Absolution will cover you specifically on features that are not specified on the average anonymity test. Absolution changes key features such as the host-name and NetBIOS, as an example, which when matching information up to any online fingerprint test, would be enough to legally provide "plausible deniability" if certain precautions are followed and taken seriously.

This is my first review of a product on HF. First of all NoodleBot has fast, and great support for his product. I had one issue with my License getting locked due to me connecting to many VPN's and exceeding the cap. He resolved this issue about 15 minutes after this occurred. Anyway the product is great, including option from 4+ tools I was using before and more. This is truly a quick and easy way to gain anonymity on a network. After setting up your preferences you are set. Saves me about 10 minutes of work every time I start my VM, and the GUI shows all your information (Computer Name, Mac Address, etc.) on one simple window so you can keep track of your settings. Can't thank this guy enough, Vouch for NoodleBot!

- 1) <https://i.imgur.com/keA28IM.png> Why so many tabs/icons?
- 2) The "VPN Bypass" doesn't seem to work for sites like HF for example - The reason why I purchased this is so that I can use a VPN for everything but bypass the VPN for when I want to connect to specific sites.

Thanks for purchasing!

The icon spam issue is a little bug I've gotta fix. Hopefully this will be resolved in the next update. I hope it isn't too much of a concern meanwhile. Nonetheless it will be fixed up.

The VPN bypass is working, I suggest to make sure the website is spelled correctly and/or you have the correct hosts listed, (take no offence to if you did this already, just saying). I have been having a small issue with doing this on HF recently through another method I use personally and have the same error; it seems to be related to HF's hosting or DNS.

I'll have this looked into ASAP, and will post of any solution.

Also I may suggest to try an alternate server if you are using a VPN and this might resolve the issue at hand.

(Feb 18, 2016 06:24 PM)Binary Ghoul Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) Can this isolate the environment? Can it stop backdoors? It says its boosts your internet connection how is this possible?

For your first question, no it cannot isolate the environment that you are running, that is something more along the lines of virtualization or sandbox software.

As for your second question, depending on your definition for backdoors; yes. Using Absolution on a wireless network will make it significantly more difficult or impossible for an attacker to launch a MITM attack on you because they would not be able to differentiate you from other connected users.

The same feature will also allow you to gain access to MAC/NetBIOS specific accounts, networks or machines.

The ability to boost Internet speeds is based off of having access to premium DNS servers. At the moment, there is nine DNS servers that customers are allowed to use; or you may simply add your own preferred DNS server in and do use that. The DNS servers that I have provided just have different abilities; some of them being pornography filters, ad blocking filters, and fishing or malware filters for example, however there are a couple that are solely dedicated to trying to get the best speed possible and some are dedicated to more accurate search results. Each one really has a specific use or benefit!

I as well get pretty annoyed when seeing users struggle with this issue, however sometimes I notice it was due to outdated software or due to a bunch of antivirus related tools installed that can potentially block things from working as they should.

If you decide to buy, rest in mind that I have customer support as one of the key elements and I will bear with you every step of the way and make sure that you get the program working.

If you decide to buy, rest in mind that I have customer support as one of the key elements and I will bear with you every step of the way and make sure that you get the program working.

Yes, I so want to buy this only thing stopping me is just the NetSeal. I have tested taking everything like AV and Firewall off with no luck. I cant think of anything else. I will be contacting NetSeal Support and see, as soon as i get it fixed i will buy this.

Every netseal licensed program - you've had 100% failure rate with every software you've tried? That HAS to be something with your OS.

I do you have quite a few customers that are running Windows 8.1, however if you don't feel comfortable making the decision until you have the current issue fixed then by all means take your time with it. It would be best to get an explanation of why netseal is doing that to you.

Hello OP,

I read the topic and found your software was outstanding regarding the reviews.

However I have 2 problems:

I bought 2 copies of absolution one with paypal the other with BTC

1. My paypal account has been charged of 9.99 dollars but I never received a link to the email adress I provided. I tried to contact your sale service but it appeared offline...I bought around 4 hours ago so far no emails but maybe will I hear from them tomorrow.

2. On another email account I received a link for the copy I bought with BTC. I downloaded the content however the program would not complete the installation. I have the installation browser stating that it will create a directory, I click on agree then it says there is an error and I can try to install it later on (I have windows 8.1). I went to the knoweldge base of your website to see how to solve this issue but despite many attempts the 3 articles mentioned on that webpage won t open. So far I don t think that there is a netseal issue since I don t have the netseal browser popping up.

I know that it may be unnapropriate to explain my troubleshootings here but regarding the first point I wanted to leave a trace of the approximative time of the transaction that did not provided me a DL link and regarding the second point since it s not possible to read the articles on the website (I tried 3 different internet browsers) and that no online assistance is available I was wondering if you could provided me some help.

Aside those two points I just can t wait to use your software since privacy is the most valuable thing on the net.

Congratulations again for having built such an ingenious software. I acknowledge it s all my bad if it s not working since so many gentlemen vouched for your work on 21 pages so far.

Waiting to hear from you
Best regards

Thanks for the post. Have no fears to post here, it is highly encouraged. Every review and piece of feedback will help me to help you, the customers, to have the best possible program.

The installation process is designed to run specifically optimized for Windows XP/Vista/7. I did not anticipate so many customers running 8.1 - for the other privacy concerns within.

The installation process is beneficial to you by providing you with all neccassary components to run the software right out of the box, fixing and troubleshooting automatically any issues - except this won't function properly on some Windows 8.1/10 machines.

I will pm you with a solution to work around this problem and get it running ASAP.
I will also be writing you regarding the second purchase you made.

Yes this is perfectly paired with most privacy solutions such as proxies, VPN's, virtual machines, etc.

Windows 10 will have some slight limitations (Killswitch has had some reported errors) but most features should work fine.

polopolo - February 28, 2016, 5:33 am

Dear NoodleBot

Thank you for your PM.

Unfortunately I cannot reply it since I do not have 25 posts on HF yet.

To reply part of your PM I first bought another copy because I did not get the link the first time but after a second thought since each copy need to be running on a single computer and that I have two computers (one with windows 8.1 which is my professional computer the other with windows 7) I will keep the two licences since it is still intereting to protect my privacy on both.

So no worry I will not ask for a refund of the fist copy since such a brillant invention for such a low price is more than a good deal.

To get back to the main topic in your next PM would you be kind enough to provide me, if possible, with an email adress so that I can write to you on a not public forum (since I will need to provide you the name of my email adress with which I used papypal to purchase the first copy)?

Waiting for your answer.

best regards

What exactly does this provide? Seems as though a VPS < VPN < Proxy would serve to be just fine.

Hi there.

This program is designed to provide users with additional layers of security, regardless of their current security setup is. You can read more about the features in the FAQ.

Sure, that method might do fine, but there's nothing wrong with taking additional steps or precautions to protect yourself.

And one more reason that might reflect everyday computer users, is the relief of ensuring your wifi connection is as secure as possible, because there are inherent risks of using wifi in public places or even your own network.

Feel free to message me if you have any other questions.

Feel free to message me if you have any other questions. Setting up a VPS > VPN > Sock5 will completely take away all the risks of using wifi in public places. As well as your own network.

Okay, what "additional security" do you provide? Because all I see is you saying "functionality" to the VPN you use and "extra layers" What Extra Layers are you talking about in this 6 layer protection?

NoodleBot™ - April 20, 2016, 10:04 pm

Hi there,

It most likely will for what you are thinking. But then the question comes down to

- a) How did you acquire said VPS server? Paid/Free?
- b) How much do you trust said VPN server? Paid/Free?
- c) And the same with your proxy provider. Paid/Free?

You don't need to answer any of these - I am just pointing out the steps taken here, and how they might appear to be safe, but at a second glance may not be so safe (especially if leaving financial paper trails and "fingerprints" everywhere.)

Furthermore, I did not mean that your specific mentioned combination is not effective - I am simply getting at that there are multiple ways to do it, and there is never anything wrong with employing another safety net.

My service is here so that you don't need to trust your VPS or VPN provider - in fact, the argument I am getting at here is that you should never trust a service with your information, and to prevent it whenever possible. That's what Absolution will do.

However, I am not getting into this. Absolution it not a VPS/VPN nor a proxy but rather to be used in COMBINATION with these services or tools.

I am more focused on providing personal security and anonymity here, however Absolution can also be used by administrators to gain access to specific machines or networks, or to circumvent restrictions.

You may read more by looking at my extensively documented FAQ under the graphics in a spoiler.

If you have any more questions or comments, please message me.

Some updates have been released!

*Disable UAC (User Account Control) has been added for supported Operating Systems (Windows XP does not contain UAC, therefore is not supported for this feature.

*Balloon notifications have now been repaired for Windows XP/Vista/7. Please let me know if you see any bugs with the notifications.

*Disable and remove timestamps has been added.

*Disable and remove Last Access Logs ("LAL" or "LA Logs") has been added.

*Disable Aero Mode has been added

Optimization for Windows XP/Vista/7 is complete - Next update will contain more optimizations.

All updates listed here are fitted and programmed accordingly to support Windows XP, Vista, and 7.

Whilst there is no guarantee of support for Windows 8 and 10 systems, most features will inherently function the same as their counterparts. There are some exceptions to this, and if you have any questions before purchasing, please do not hesitate to contact me.

I have obtained permission from OpenDNS for customers to use the OpenDNS servers provided in Absolution, as well as 9 other DNS providers for a total of 10 different public and premium DNS servers.

Thanks, but did not even remotely answer my question.

I've released a new update.

This update brings to Absolution a handy notepad, some small new features such as changing balloon notifications on or off, and most importantly I would like to finally introduce port forwarding as a feature of Absolution. Effortlessly scan and forward your ports for use with applications and web services, it is designed to be as easy as possible.

Port forwarding with Absolution will require your router to support UPNP. Please message me to help identify any problems.

That is the realest quote out there tbh. Stuff like tor browser and public VPN's are still logged whether you believe it or not.

With this, your privacy is #1 and you will not be tracked!

Absolution would be a great tool to use in combination with Tor to further secure the "identity" that Tor provides. You won't have to do any extra configurations either.

What?

Hostname changing will just change the hostname, which depending on your OS might be referred to as PC name.

There are no changes to any file structures or anything like that... I'm assuming you have an infection or some other issue.

Just take a look at the FAQ.

Definitely not "fully anonymous", it takes the skillset and techniques as well as the knowledge of years of experience.

The program just allows you to use some powerful features that if used correctly (with your current security/Opsec) that would aid greatly in staying undetected, or blending in.

Yes there is always a way, for sure. That's why you want to seal up as many holes as possible.

Please make sure you are running the installation as an administrator.

Depending on your system security settings, you may need to allow your antivirus software to interact with Absolution in its whitelist/exceptions list.

Please let me know if any issues.

Yes that looks like it's added the Ip appropriately.

I will definitely be considering your recommendation to add a save button, I've been meaning to put a universal save settings button.

Sorry for the delays over the last few days, my communication has been sloppy. I have been reformatting my machine as well as being very busy at work, as well as school starting. I know this is not an excuse, so I'm going back to work on everything as soon as possible. Thanks for sticking with me and continuing to have patience.

Just getting home from work. Will be trying to get some work done and get these updates published to all the users who have not received it.

Sorry for the delays.

I have just released an update which should fix the issue that most are having, with not getting the latest updates. Please let me know if you have any issues getting the update still.

Also please let me know if you have any issues with the start of keys, they are being rewritten.

The killswitch feature will not function properly with Windows 10. I hope to address this one issue very soon.

I have noticed that bug on windows XP, and windows 10. I am hoping to have this fixed as soon as possible. I forgot to save one of the changes before updating and I keep forgetting, and is very annoying cosmetically! ;(

The backup button might as well function differently on Windows 10. If you aren't able to load your back up, you can still enter the custom name(s) that you had previously with the machine options.

Please let me know if you do have any questions, and I will be looking into these issues as soon as possible. Thank you for reporting that error.

Unfortunately as of right now I am unable to maintain the project due to time restrictions - access to current Absolution licenses will cease as of April 2nd.

I wish to provide access for current users and will do what I can to accommodate lifetime customers.

Anyone interested in taking the project over, under certain business conditions, please contact me to make arrangements.

It has been a pleasure working with and providing support to my incredible loyal customers. Looking forward to having you as a valued customer once again in future endeavours.

Thanks and Regards,
