I want a film about someone who is poor then becomes really rich and shows how he does it. I don't want to watch 'The wolf of wall street'.

Scareface, Trading Places, Blow, The Pursuit of Happyness, Catch Me If You Can, The Social Network.

Scarface was the shit! Literally, blew my fucking mind.

The social network is good too, if you're really interested in finding out how facebook was created.

Scarface*: Yes.

Trading Places: Yes.

Blow: Eh.

The Pursuit of Happiness*: He didn't get rich quick but k.

Catch Me If You Can: Neither did he, years of doing smaller things than moving up to high quality check frauds.

The Social Network: eh.

I can't believe no ones suggested brewsters millions.

Last time I read OP's post, it said nothing about "get rich quick". Only get rich.

I think he means movies in which you start from nothing and make riches.

Get Rich or Die Trying is a personal favorite, covers 50 cent and some of his own personal life in a way.

Will smith bought out a new one... It's like Focus I do believe.

Yeah I get what your saying but more important life lessons can be learned from brewsters millions than from get rich or die trying.
