Thread: I believe it has been long enough to say ~ how I got a free Alienware \$3,000+ laptop!

???? - December 8, 2015, 7:14 pm

I think it has been long enough for me to be able to talk about this. About 7 years ago it feels like, I earned a lot of money and bought myself a laptop. It was one of my first big purchases on my new bank account that my parents made me so I was hoping there would be no issues, but I made the cash deposit (holding $3,000 in bills in your hands is a great, rare feeling) into my account and I was good to go.

A few weeks after ordering my bad boy of the day, I checked my bank account to see a charge of $3,000, but it didn't seem to be negative, so I got my dad to look at it. We looked at the numbers and triple checked the balance, and I went onto their account to make sure I wasn't confusing positive for negative. Turns out, the computer company I bought the laptop sent me the money back. Crazy. It was like winning the lottery ?

Well, you got very lucky. Just hope that they don't realize their mistake.

Seven years after the fact? I doubt it.

I only Google'd "$3000 in cash" and found the wad which represented that. I didn't know it was tied to any story.

Informing the retailers of their mistake now.

To be honest, it was a pretty obscure site (I was pretty excited, I know), so I couldn't even tell you who they were anymore. I used my Mom's old email she deleted to order it.

Why would they just refund you ?
and let you keep the laptop

3k isnt a small amount

Refunding upon such high prices are only replacement refundations. Which means that they give him the same item, but not the amount of it's cost.

It was the price of the laptop, sorry.
