Thread: No More Rep Fucks

Omniscient - December 9, 2015, 9:52 am

Don't applaud just yet.

In an effort to tone down some harsh language and negative energy on the forum I'm altering the term Rep Fuck into a Rep Kill. No more RFs. I want everyone to refer to them as RK's or Rep Kills.

Help Doc is already changed to reflect this.

Duk. - December 9, 2015, 9:53 am

Oh, interesting I was gonna say it will ruin some stuff on HF if no RF's period :P Anyways, Rep Kills sounds more professional.

Calcyon - December 9, 2015, 9:53 am

I'm sure a lot of people got really excited when they first saw the thread title.

citg0 - December 9, 2015, 9:54 am

Good to see you won't be fucking anybody, but killing em lol. Definitely puts a harsh / neg energy just because of the name of it, good alter imo.

xx_pro_xx_mlg_xx_hax0r - December 9, 2015, 9:54 am

But Rep Kill doesn't sound as scary...

RYLTY - December 9, 2015, 9:54 am

Certainly sounds a lot more like a punishment than a gang bang like it did before. Seems aight.

What about Reprimand I think this word is more serious Rep Kill sounds like a power-up or something.

dopepizza - December 9, 2015, 9:59 am

Rep kills sound really harsh to.

I think we should call it: Rep remove. It is a simple name and it speaks for itself.

When an new member joins the forums and he/she hears the word: "Rep kill", he/she wouldn't know what it means.

I think we should really call it Rep Remove, it sounds more professional. And we could refer to it as RR's.

Rep Kill? Come on Omni I know you can do better than that.

Blazin - December 9, 2015, 10:07 am negativity only brings failure anyway. Will be a while till we all get use to the new name change though.

Good. I get to remove harsh language and replace it with a more ominous threatening tone.

Quote:In all fairness he shouldn't have to tell everyone how to behave in a respectful manner

Unfortunately it's not how it is nor will it ever be. And that's the entire internet not just HF. The worst is game chat. People behave so poorly.

So tempted to grant you the first official RK.

Because this mainly pertains to the marketplace, which should be professional. Plus, saying fuck all the time takes the weight off of the word; the word is best used effectively better ways. Money causes a lot of headaches and scam reports aren't very fun to deal with. It also creates possibly more incentive for sellers knowing they wont get RK'd over stupid stuff and they could safely invest without fear.

Actually, I do support this. I only found out what a Rep (Kill/Fuck?) was recently, and damn. If it's going to be an official term, best to keep it professional and free of vulgar terms. Maybe a change of the thread title would be suitable? I thought that rep kills would no longer exist.

Sorry for my sarcasm and I mean it with respect but this is a forum where we come, speak our minds, hack, make money, code, have fun etc...

I'm assuming it will catch certain words or phrases when both used in a sentence together, with no words in between. This appears to be due to a policy change, and this reason ("In an effort to tone down some harsh language and negative energy"), thus it doesn't seem logical that the word "hi" or anything similar would become filtered, as its just linked to a change on Omni's side to reflect site changes.

Feel free to correct me anyone, I'm just stating my interpretation.

I stated that me saying "will the word hi be filtered in months to come" was sarcasm. I wasn't being serious. Just stating that a lot of words and things are changing around here, some I like and some I don't. But regardless of my thoughts the changes will still go ahead. So, it really doesn't matter ;)

I gathered that this was sarcasm, but I was using your word to label all maybe non-offensive or violating terms in the form of an example. There is many changes, but ultimately, they'll be for the best, if they don't work, then they might change back, but that's it I guess.

I don't need 100% effectiveness.

"Rep Fuck" and "RepFuck" will likely be enough.

Filter will not effect the word Fuck by itself nor do I have any plans to censor it.

Quote:Too bad that nice old HF feeling is fadding away.

Not sure HF ever had a "nice" old feeling. That's in your head. Sites been mostly the same type of trolls since it's been open. Members are either nice or they aren't. Policies generally don't effect that simple truth. What does change is how site policy regards members actions. You don't make members nice by making it a rule.

Its only because Rep Fuck denotes and invokes a sort of ganging up on someone feeling. I see what you're saying, but that's not where he's coming from. People curse on this forum all the time, hell, I made a thread recently on how to find a lot of such posts, but the word filter will realistically get 80%+ (not sure how many people try to avoid the filters by editing their posts) of the cases in which people use the term, and that is fantastic and exactly what I believe he's trying to accomplish, to create a better marketplace atmosphere for buyers and sellers.

"more professional doesn't apply" was kinda gonna be my sentiment.. We all say many vulgar words, and thats not gonna die without killing this community.

I have realized recently that there are many many mature folks rounds here. So enforcing polite is prolly better. (even tho I have my F* U moments, as does everyone).

Good decision Omni to tone down harshness in general (IMO of course).

I will likely wait a few days then add a word filter so that all previous posts with the term is properly changed.

I like short and sweet. I did consider Rep Death but I saved 2 letters by using Kill instead.

Good. I get to remove harsh language and replace it with a more ominous threatening tone.

Unfortunately it's not how it is nor will it ever be. And that's the entire internet not just HF. The worst is game chat. People behave so poorly.

So tempted to grant you the first official RK.

Prefer to simply stop cursing out members when trying to convey site policies. Going to try and change my tone in general. Better for both me and the community. But please, let's focus on the original topic.

I don't see this affecting how the community uses vulgar words. There are maaany different ways to curse at someone ? though, it will help with seeing a lot of it in different areas of the site, so overall, the amount of "fucks" are going to be falling from the nonexistent HackForum's sky over sections that carry a lot of traffic here, will also not exist as much.

Technically true. The function operates exactly the same. But there is a mental difference for me personally and I have to believe possibly for the recipient as well. Just starting off a PM warning with..." You have been Rep Fucked for..." just seems to make it go south from there.
