

Forum:Hack Forums

Thread: Is this trust worthy

FrankDM - December 12, 2015, 3:52 am

Hello

A while ago I posted I wanted access to two Facebook profiles. Someone contacted me and told me he could do it (bruteforce).

Anyway, we negotiated on the price and agreed to something. However he wants payment in advance in Bitcoins. I proposed to have him do it first, send me a screenshot when it is done from within the account as proove and then I pay and he gives me the login information.

I tought this was a fair deal, especially for a first time trade. But he refuses to do this and only wants money upfront.

He does have positive rep on this board (in the hundreds) but if I read his history there were some scam reports. He told me that it is inevitable someone would sooner or later create new usernames to post negative ratings.

What should I do? Why does he not want to send me prove he did it before actually sending the login information just to make me at ease?

Thanks!

Headdy - December 12, 2015, 3:54 am

You could discuss a partly payment with him. Pay like 50/50 for a clear kind of proof, 50% for the login.

FrankDM - December 12, 2015, 4:13 am

(Dec 12, 2015 04:54 AM)Headdy Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) You could discuss a partly payment with him. Pay like 50/50 for a clear kind of proof, 50% for the login.

I would have no problem paying 100% if he had the proof but he wants it all before he starts. That is my problem.

Kavalli † - December 12, 2015, 4:17 am

No don't pay him. Clear scam. If he gets you the account, than you can pay him. That's how these things go. Just show proof of funds.

TheBoss411 - December 12, 2015, 5:32 am

You would be better off buying your own brute force tool on hack forums. They have some good ones for Facebook.

Tetro - December 12, 2015, 5:34 am

Get proof he has account yet, like screenshot of him logged, and then pay him and wait for logins, should be all right

FrankDM - December 12, 2015, 10:37 am

Thanks for all the advice people. I will show him this thread and give him one more chance to first show proof before payment. If he still does not agree I will look at those brute force tools mentioned.