Thread: [A fortune for a Penny \[Updating\]](#)

K?ng - December 20, 2015, 8:09 am

I'll be updating this every now and then. I have invested $500-1k into each of 9 penny stocks and I put $5k into ENDV. I know the market is pretty high risk but when is a penny stock ever not risky?

I just hope my roi is enough to offset my losses in some of the other companies.

Good luck. But there are proven strategies out there for penny stocks. Hope you are not playing the lottery method.

I know. I did my research on the companies prior and I honestly think they have great upside potential. I say "penny stocks" but they aren't actually start ups, they've been up for a while now and have been established, they just recently had some hard times in the last 6-8 months.

Nice to hear that. Hope you make good ROI. ?

Good luck, might get into this myself.

Any tips?

Don't buy at the top. Practice before hand. Avoid hyped up stocks. Research research research. Don't trade penny stocks if possible.

Yea, Trigger is correct on all counts. I honestly am just in penny stocks because I have some funds that I can risk (aka won't really affect my life in a negative way if I were to lose it) and just want to test my luck in pennies.

It may take a long time for you to find even one suitable penny stock, honestly.

Good Luck to you. Love seeing others take on Penny Stocks.

K?ng - December 21, 2015, 11:09 pm

Thanks for all the support guys. I really appreciate it. I'm currently up 3% across all of them but I'm hoping to see more green tomorrow!

Hey guys, so I just wanted to get your feedback: Should I update this daily or weekly?

S2xx - December 23, 2015, 8:52 pm

You might want to consider $ASTi, read their chart and if you can get in at .11 and wait you'll probably make 100% return.

rogelio11 - December 23, 2015, 9:16 pm

good luck,

wish you the best and hopefully you hit a good ROI on your picked stocks.

i will soon get in as well.

gotta research the right one that is.

K?ng - December 23, 2015, 9:57 pm

Thanks guys.

Progress Breakdown (1 week):

Penny #1: +92.4%

Penny #2: +8.2%

Penny #3: -18.6%

Penny #4: +1.13%

Penny #5: +0.6%

Penny #6: -9.0%

Penny #7: -8.86%

Penny #8: +0.2%

Penny #9: +36.4%

Total %ROI: 102.4%

Total Profit ($): 9710$ (This includes all fees)

I sold out of ENDV after making 1.8% because I don't think it'll really go up much (My calculations above does NOT include ENDV).

Damn, that looks good. You experienced with this stuff?

I think an update when there are significant changes in terms of % or profit would be nice.

Experienced? I think I'm considered an amateur or beginner. I, honestly, just started researching into penny stocks within the month of December and I think I just got lucky with most of my picks.

I'll do that then. I forgot to mention that yesterday, I was actually down in Penny #3 by around -60%. It was painful... Definitely not stable at all. I'll probably sell the ones I'm up in and buy in again during dips. Current ADX value for all of them is below 20 so I'm pretty sure they aren't gonna keep climbing.

JustHayden - December 24, 2015, 7:43 am

I put $1k into WAVX and it's been on the verge of spiking or crashing for 6 months. Some deals have been struck recently though so its looking more good than not.

For WAVX, you should've waited until Monday for it to drop below the $0.10 mark and then wait until it goes back up to $0.2+.

Good job and good luck in the future :D

A quick question, if you don't mind sharing, how do you find these stocks and where do you get all the information about these stocks

Reddit and OTCMarket is my main sources of info but everyone has their own methods.

If you want to earn high ROI, why not invest in emerging markets too ?
