

Forum:Hack Forums

Thread: Should i still support this "Customer" edit: resolved.

i a m g o n e - December 20, 2015, 10:20 am

So long story short

This guy, he sorta kinda swindled me

He didn't really purchase my thing(the payment was from btc from payivy autobuy, so i guess he didn't understand, and didnt send the full payment, so they didn't send me anything)

Anyway, me being nice(i honestly just noticed my mistake when every other person ordering my products via btc from payivy gets a download link to there email, but whatever) I decided to send him a version

Do i or do i give him a update(Note, the version he has works perfectly fine)

He's very rude/demanding in general(unfortunatelty this was over skype, so i can't use that to get him gone)

What do i do here?

edit: resolved

Silent Storm™ - December 20, 2015, 10:22 am

If he didn't purchase anything don't give him an update, it was kind of your fault in the first place for giving him a copy.

Das Swag - December 20, 2015, 10:22 am

If he didn't purchase it you're not required to give him an update nor support him at all.

Balding - December 20, 2015, 10:23 am

If you need to ask for advice on this please stop doing whatever you're doing.

Stashyy - December 20, 2015, 10:24 am

He didn't purchase it so don't give him any updates.

i a m g o n e - December 20, 2015, 10:24 am

(Dec 20, 2015 11:22 AM)Silent Storm™ Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) If he didn't purchase anything don't give him an update, it was kind of your fault in the first place for giving him a copy.

(Dec 20, 2015 11:22 AM)Das Swag Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) If he didn't purchase it you're not required to give him an update nor support him at all.

(Dec 20, 2015 11:23 AM)Bald. Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) If you need to ask for advice on this please stop doing whatever you're doing.

Was just wanting a second opinion is all, lol

Not too worried about it.

