6.5 Year Feedback Thread - By Inveno (AKA Phire nuk3r)

Suitable music for thread (seems this is what the cool kids are doing):

[Video: https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=Kwle_sjKeAY]

Hi there, HackForums members, after 6.5 years of being on here, I've finally decided to make a feedback thread discussing my thoughts and concerns, as well as my many positive experiences here.

How I Came Across HackForums

Back in the days, I used to be an avid online poker player and was pretty amazed at how I could play poker virtually against other players;

I continued to play until I took a pretty big hit and lost over $2.5K, which was a lot to me at the time and I was pretty desperate to get it back, so I began looking for online hacks for the poker software I was using (IT WASN'T SKIDDY IN THOSE DAYS!!!) and quickly found HackForums.net, however, there was no avail. I gave up on looking for these hacks and slowly but surely started becoming more and more involved with the community.

My Time On HackForums

As I became more and more involved with the community, I formed a tight bond with Omniscient and we used to talk quite a lot, I was promoted to staff in mid 2010 and I was liked within the community. I helped a lot of users with PHP, as well as personal problems, I also helped to clear out a bunch of asswipes from the forum too, lol...

I had a little bit of a falling out with Omni and was demoted, however, we made up after some time and I was promoted back to staff again and went about my usual activities, having fun and interacting with the community. My life was sex, drugs and rock & roll. I then started becoming less active and lost interest in the forum and began focusing on building businesses outside of HF so I decided to resign from staff and I slowly but surely became inactive.

This month (Dec 2015), I came back, and the community is better than ever and booming. I've been quite active and posting and buying users upgrades and awards here and there and overall, just been having fun having the freedom to discuss whatever I like with other members and relate to them. I enjoy talking about business, money, and just overall fun subjects that interest me. I intend to stay active on here for as long as possible and hopefully get back to where I was back then in terms of activity and posting quality. I also joined "Writers", which I believe I was a leader of back in the day, although I've discussed it with Viral Dragon and he's just as unsure as me; if anyone can answer me 'did "Reviewers" become "Writers"?', that would be great.

Upon my return, I noticed a website that looked to have a lot of potential, so I decided to buy it from the owner and promote / represent it myself on here, however, this isn't a thread to promote my site.

My Feedback On The Community

The HackForums community is awesome and is even better now than it was back then, other than a few LQ posts every now and then, which I'm sure to report, it is fantastic and I would like to thank each member for contributing to the forum and entertaining me when I'm feeling bored. I feel like the community is less closely connected as it was back in those days, but that's only natural with how much the forum has grown.

Another thing that I notice is an increase in scammers, which is unfortunate but the point from the last paragraph still applies here, it is only natural with how much the forum has grown. There is also a lot of drama within the marketplace and among some of the more "popular" members, which isn't necessarily a good thing, but it's entertaining to watch how things unfold.

I love the community as it is now and thoroughly enjoy being a part of it. I enjoy making posts and responding to other users thoughts, I also like how users respond to my thoughts too.

There's nobody in this community that I can say I dislike; I have respect for everyone here and strive to make it mutual. So many people on here are great people overall and are the kind of people I'd like to associate myself with.

I have a lot of respect for the fellow businessmen of HackForums, as from experiences of my own, I know how tough it is and I feel as if that the businessmen aren't given enough credit, considering how much it actually takes out of you.

Notable Members

Unfortunately, I no longer have any friends on HackForums :(, but these are a few who stand out to me.

Grievous

For his efforts against scammers, as well as upgrading and giving awards to many members of the community.

Factor8

For being an awesome friend back in the days.

gonda?

For being my handy developer of Onu.im and being a genuinely nice guy to talk to. Also, most likely a child genius, 14 year old with excellent knowledge covering a ton of programming languages.

T3h Hack3r - December 21, 2015, 3:46 pm

Holy cow. It's you. Just hit my six year anniversary on this site today. Last time I heard you went to Jail. ?

OH so you're that Phire nuk3r I always heard about. I never really bothered to check your past usernames.

Quote:'did "Reviewers" become "Writers"?', that would be great. No. They were separate.

minimalist - December 21, 2015, 3:49 pm

Kondax is 14 years old? The same guy who made the post-rep change calculating userscript?

I don't know much about you but I've seen you around a fair bit.

Griev?us - December 21, 2015, 3:49 pm

Quote:if anyone can answer me 'did "Reviewers" become "Writers"?', that would be great.

Reviewers did not shift into Writers but rather was deminished due to the conspiracy that people were paying Reviewers for good reviews.

That's what I've heard, unsure though.

Thank you for the shoutout and cheers to the upcoming years. I hope you remain active and plan to stay much longer.

(Dec 21, 2015 05:41 PM)Auron Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) No, it was because the group's purpose was becoming obsolete to the time of it's closing. Inactivity was also an issue as well which was most likely due to the fact that recruitment was only every 1-2 years and there were only a little over a dozen reviewers at a time.

Interesting, theories were all I heard but thank you for the clarification.

Seems nice and short. My question why do you have numerous awards in your profile? Are you on a road to obtaining?

I guess you could say that they are goals, although I already have a few of them. I just think the awards look really cool.

#Skyline - December 21, 2015, 4:10 pm

Good to see old staff members stay around within the community, even after there duties.

Very nice feedback. ?

Not really. We used to have a system put in place so that the book seller was unable to see who would be reviewing their books.

I didn't know who you were (obviously, 2014 join date)

I also didn't really use this site until the end of 2015...

But I went through your threads and just see a bunch from December 2015, and then it jumps all the way to September of 2013 lmao.

Nice to see you back, and I hope I can get to know you.

I had 0 tolerance for trolling. Maybe if then was now, I'd hand out a warning PM, depending on the severity of the situation.

Yeah, things were different back then though I remember. I do remember like a bunch of people creating threads in this section about you, the first time you were staff, shit loads of people bitching about your repfucks. Believe this was the first time you were staff right?

JASON AND MEDEA - December 21, 2015, 7:06 pm

Sad that he fell into selling his account.
