Thread: Ripper.pw - Scammer Database

Calcyon - December 24, 2015, 1:26 am

I've just launched Ripper which is a database full of scam reports on forums such as HF, LF, FK, and Nulled. 95% of the results are from HF, and I'm hoping to add more from other forums to protect everyone. This website has an API which is free to use, which you can find information on how to use it below. I'm aware some reports may be missing, I may have missed a few. Feel free to add them to the database by clicking the link below.

You are able to search users based on:

- Their Alias (Forum Names, Skype Names, etc)
- Their Name (First & Last)
- Their PP / BTC / LTC / etc Address
- Their Profiles (Forums, Games, etc)

Submit a Report

API Documentation

This is a non-profit community ran project. Please add scams that you see or scams that happen to you to the database, where I will review it and add it. This already has a shit ton of results in the database, and I'm looking to add more.

Contact me, I will show how to make your JSON response nicer.

Just OCD of me.

Sounds like a cool idea, remember to put in that Anonymous (the hacking service dude which still has his website) has scammed over $480,000 in BTC; but the largest scam report on site is $17k.

Someone's hitting the website offline, will be back shortly.

Krew - December 24, 2015, 4:42 am

Omni won't allow you to advertise this on HF, for sure.

I launched scammerDB.info (which is basically the same idea) a few years back and I was warned by Omni that such a site is not allowed to be advertised on HF.

Then he may PM me or junk the thread if he feels the need to.

Nothing in the help documents says anything against this.

Also add a search possibility for any type of communication, just enter the handle/adress and then it will show it is Jabber/Yahoo/E-mail/Skype/TorChat/Kik etc.

Llama™ - December 24, 2015, 1:35 pm

Add a different window where you enter a Skype and you can see if it's an impostor. There's a list of known impostors on HF somewhere.
