New Years Resolution Giveaway - Presented by the Red Lions

The premise of this giveaway is pretty simple. Here in the Red Lions, we aren't just looking to throw prizes and gifts at specific people out of sheer chance--we want to encourage you to put thought into what you want to do in the new year. Rather than just coming up with some BS goal that you'll never reach, or something completely abstract, we'd like each and every one of you to spend a few minutes coming up with a legitimate goal/resolution for 2016. We'll give all entrants a week from this post to come up with around five sentences (not extremely strict) of something you'd like to do in this brand new year. Prizes will be awarded not by how "good" your goal is, but by how well thought-out your response is. We'd like people to be completely honest with themselves, and lay it all out for us.

However, even with our unique style of giveaway, we still have our fair share of prizes. Among the prizes offered will be:

$100 BTC - Yakz

$100 BTC - Grievous

2x Emerald Awards - !!* Alone Vampire *!!

1x Thread Design - iHydra

1x Gift Award - iHydra

Assorted Games (Humblebundle, Steam Gifts) - energ1zer

Hamware - January 1, 2016, 12:45 pm

This year is for me to be happy with my body, I'm setting myself to go on a strict diet and overcome my cravings to junk food. I've already started at the start of December, hopefully I'll continue to follow this, and stick by this goal for 2016. Through out most of my life I've just been sitting down in front of a computer screen, not socializing or going out and just being proactive. However last year I decided to make a change to all of that. I may be posting a progression thread somewhere on Hackforums, of my body. Anyway awesome contest, GL to everyone following their new years resolution! <3

?strid - January 1, 2016, 12:52 pm

In 2016, I want to start working out and get fit, can't sit behind this computer all day like last year. I want to learn python this year and continue my goal to be a computer science major, something i wanted to be since middle school. I want to get a job in the meantime and try to support myself, family can only support you for so long. I want to leave the house more often and be more social with others, staying on the computer mostly to advance with my computer science studies. Last off, I want to work to be someone that others look up to and be an inspiration to others. Thanks for your time in reading this, Happy New Year!

The Illusionist - January 1, 2016, 12:57 pm

In 2016 I hope I can upgrade my "Currency Exchanging" that I do into a actual company. I'm trying to set everything up right now. When it's a actual company I'll have some extra features regarding PayPal. Also it will be my second company I'll be running. In 2016 I want my first company to succeed in 2015 it was mainly start up and everything is ready and prepared I hope I can make a good running company helping many students in the way. Also I'd like to give more of my profit to charity (I'm already donating monthly) I'd like to make that amount higher, depending on the amount of profit I'll be generating over the next few months.

Stashy - January 1, 2016, 1:00 pm

Well, it's finally a new year, so I guess that also means a fresh start -- literally fresh.

(2015)

First thing I do when I wake up in the morning is go straight back to sleep. Sometimes I don't even wake up in the morning, and it'll end up being 3 or 4 PM when I do actually wake up. Once I finally do push myself to get out of bed, I pretty much just procrastinate and sit around the rest of the day. I never really have any motivation to go out and do anything, and I'm kind of just in a state of "Well, I wasted my day, it's already almost over, might as well just sit around and do nothing."

(2016)

Well, now that it's a new year and a fresh start and everything, I think I'm going to start going to sleep much earlier so I can actually wake up on time and feel like I have a whole day ahead of me. I'll also take daily (morning and night) showers as opposed to waiting every few days, because I think taking showers and feeling clean in general gives you a sense of wanting to do things for some odd reason. I'm also going to be putting myself to the task of taking early morning walks, and once I'm out and about for a bit, then I'll consider taking some down time to just sit around and browse Hack Forums and stuff. I think my overall resolution for the new year is to stop being lazy and actually get dressed up and ready for every day so I feel better.

Anyway, thank you so much for the giveaway, and good luck with everyone else's new year resolutions.

ZuGgY - January 1, 2016, 1:03 pm

Well, for the past 2 years or so, I've wanted to learn how to code. Specially, learn how to code in Python, but have always been busy, or pushing it off, the lazy way, which is kind of sad. So this year, I want to even motivate and push myself harder to learn how to code. Recently, I discovered that some other people here are doing the same (i.e. Effexion), so I feel like this would be the best year to learn, especially times where I have a lot of free precious minutes available. I plan on maybe purchasing a course, some ebooks, or just using YouTube and Codecademy. We'll see...

Anyways, thank you guys so much! Always been a huge fan of RL! Good luck to all!

minimalist - January 1, 2016, 1:07 pm

This year, for me, is going to be a year about further improving myself. Last year it was my goal to better my physique as well as attitude towards others on here. My aim was to stray away from making neither convoluted goals nor help others, because I already do those things passively without really knowing. I'm keeping it simple this year. I have been training for over two years now, and going from a stick at 140lbs to cut at 165lbs. This year, my plan is to gain at a clean rate instead of not counting my macros and calories like I did last year. I have invested a couple thousand dollars into a home gym for my convenience as well as trying to get my mother into doing the same. That is really my only goal for this year, and I'll be putting my all into achieving what I've always been chasing and more.

Thank you for hosting such a generous contest.

Mansa - January 1, 2016, 1:07 pm

I'll be turning 21 soon so this is a very special year for me. My goals for this year are not a big jump from last years goals. It's mostly to maintain what I've been doing and improve more in certain aspects of my life. For one, I want to start eating healthier. I usually do eat healthy but going out more and being somewhat lazy at times causes me to break that habit at times. So this year, I'll stay on track and keep it clean and healthy. I'll also be hitting the gym more often (Currently 3 times a week). Hoping to boost that up to 5 times a week (Swimming and lifting). Also, since transferring from Malaysia to New York, I've got accepted into a really good college and so I need to give it my all, studying, networking, and just making the most out of the experience. Finally, continue working on my projects and finding new methods to improve my businesses, My goal financially is to make $30k this year. Good luck everyone and may you all have a great year ahead!

Black Kodak - January 1, 2016, 1:10 pm

In 2016, I'm hoping I can make my life even better. At the moment, I'm looking to go to a university, I want to get accepted and be the top in my class. Also I want to go to the gym a lot more and get ripped. Lastly I want to get rid of HF morons, and embarrass liars on the forums :) Merry Christmas & Happy New Year everyone!

HitSweMan - January 1, 2016, 1:15 pm

English is not my mother language but I'll do my best.

Everyone starts making promises to themselves but that's nothing for me. I'll take the year as it comes and will do my best. Nothing is going bad and hopefully it won't. People say that they did not workout as much as they wanted 2015 and make promise to themselves that they want to workout more 2016. First day people will start going to the gym. They will do it very fast and do workout all day until they can't do anything more. That's what people do wrong. Next day they just stop workout. Some people don't but I know that most people do. They have to sometime in their life understand that it's a long process and they can't just train out a few days super hard then just stop. You have to take step by step. Day for day. That's why it's called a yearly promise. It won't take days. Not even months sometimes. Well well, I said I don't have any promises but I want to earn more money online. I'm so lazy. I really am. I'm looking around for some stuff I can make money off. So my goal and not promise this year will be to earn more money.

I now spent a lot of time writing this and won't even have a change against fully talking English guys. I hope someone will read this and will think back about what I just said even with my bad English.

That was all for me. I'll take the $100 ^^ ?

lithuani? - January 1, 2016, 1:33 pm

In 2016, I want to start to learn PHP and MySQL properly and study everyday, compared to now where I actually pick up a book once or twice a week. I want to be more dedicated to my work and actually accomplishing tasks rather than just wasting my time. I hope to be active on HF as well, as continuing helping members. Happy new year everyone.

Biometric - January 1, 2016, 1:35 pm

I'm going to get in better physical shape, focus more on school, and try to make a lot of money. This year it's all about business.

Bay - January 1, 2016, 1:39 pm

This is the year that I will take the steps necessary into securing a comfortable future for myself. I am going to start investing in the stock market, I am hoping to earn at least 10k profit by the end of the year. I'll be investing about $50 of each paycheck into stocks, (I get paid weekly). I will also pursue a better job, I'm currently in my 2nd year of the application process to get into a local electrician apprenticeship, I'd be the youngest apprentice they have, being that I'm 18. I've already talked with the director on multiple occasions and so far it seems that I am proving to be a excellent choice for a recruit. If I get into this apprenticeship I will move out of my house, and focus on investing in stocks, and side projects such as flipping cars. If I don't get into this apprenticeship, I will request that my owners at Volkswagen and Audi send me to school to become a mechanic. I was already informed by the owner of my dealership that he has no problem sending me off to be an Audi mechanic, they see great potential in me. 2016 is going to be a great year.

justg - January 1, 2016, 1:43 pm

Mine isn't so much a resolution as it is a commitment to myself. I'm looking forward to continuing doing well in my studies (3.8 GPA after 3 semesters right now) and continuing working towards doing what I want, even if it's a field not very many people think about. It's imperative that I continue doing well, as my scholarships and future depend on it. As I said, not much of a "resolution" as it is a "keep on going with what you're doing kid", while keeping everything in balance.

Duyere - January 1, 2016, 2:25 pm

Let me start by saying that I'm not the type of person to formally make a resolution; However, my New Year's resolution is quite simple, I want to make 2016 my year of redemption.

Last year was not the best year for me. I had been arrested the previous year and charged with a DUI, had my license suspended, and I was put on probation. I've been living this past year in a hopeless depression because I've been unable to drive, find work, and just plain out enjoy life. It was my own fault that led me into that situation in the first place but sometimes we have to let "hard lessons" in life wise us up.

I'm going to take this year one step at a time.

My first goal of this year is to get my driver's license back. That will open many doors for me, allow me to find work a bit easier, and give me a social life again.

My second goal is atone for a mistake I made during the previous year, in which I'll have to spend some time in jail. I failed to sign up for drug and alcohol class in time and I could be facing time in jail.

My third goal ties into my first goal but I want to find a steady job. I have never been able to find a steady job and that's always been a goal.

My fourth goal is to aspire toward skateboarding more than I did the previous year, all to make up for loss. Skateboarding is a huge part of my life and I haven't been able to effectively pursue it this past year.

My final goal is kind of an "all-in-one" goal and that is just to turn my life around and conquer the world that has been conquering me for way too long.

DuguWudi - January 1, 2016, 4:50 pm

This year, I hope I can recoup whatever I loss last year.

Will be entering youtube scene another try, failed last year doesn't mean I will failed this year.

It's the never giveup altitude.

Otis??????????????? - January 1, 2016, 5:04 pm

I made a lot of resolutions for this New Year. I'm hoping to convince my dad to stop smoking and do my best to maintain a 4.0 GPA. Usually, people don't follow along with their resolutions, but I've made plans to keep my resolutions as long as possible (all the way till 2017). To make sure my dad stops smoking, I decided to talk to him today about the pros and made sure he knew about the cons of smoking. So far he's not really convinced, but I hope by tomorrow or sooner this week, I'll be able to convince him and get him to go on a "no smoking streak". To obtain my 4.0 GPA, I plan on changing my study habits. No more procrastinating. I already began my to-do lists, and I've accomplished everything I wanted to do today. When school resumes, I hope to pay attention in class and take better notes. One of the causes of my bad grades is due to poor note-taking skills. With better note-taking skills, I hope to finish my year with a 4.0 GPA.

Brahma™ - January 1, 2016, 5:08 pm

My first resolution of the new year is to recycle. Not only recycling helps in saving some money, It also helps in saving environment as well. I did a little research on internet and I came across some valuable information about the consequences of non-recycling. For example, plastic stays there for centuries and centuries and it turns into a sort of chemical waste that poisons the soil and makes it unproductive. So, I will be recycling many things, including usage of plastic bags and stuff.

PS: Chances are less but If I win....I'd like to have $100 BTC or Gift award.

It's been 10-15 days i have been on HF

but as in 2016 i am going to help hackforums members with some tools i will code and giveaway, i am learning VB right now and hope to master it within less than a month and hope to start my giveaways soon as i start earning, i just want to master as much computer languages as possible in 2016 so that i will be free in 17 to do something special ?

In 2015 i was new to online marketing and hardly made 60-80 $ somehow in whole year with my CPA Blog but now in 16 will also look to make a source of my income online, i don't have any ideas but i hope i will get it soon after learning on hf or don't know just hoping for best :D

I have to earn at least 15$ a month so that i will not need to ask my parents for paying internet bills :p i want to be self dependable and also want to show indian people [specially parents] that doing engineering and getting hired to job is not only source of money, that's the mentality of most indian parents and i want to break it :D

Going to wear the signature of this as i am L33T now (great thanks to guy Glitch) :D

Bamboozla - January 1, 2016, 8:16 pm

For my 2016 New Years resolution, I am going to do my best to fix something that has interfered with my life for a long time. Procrastination. I have procrastinated for as I can remember in this causes a lot of problems for me in my daily life. I almost always end up starting huge projects/assignments the night before it's due. I show up late to things most the time because I put off getting ready or leaving early. I miss getting gifts for people on their birthday..these are just some examples I can think of right now.

A couple steps I plan on taking to fix this problem is by creating a daily planner, whether it be on my phone or with an actual type of calendar of some sort. Being able to write out or set a sort of reminder to get started on something or be able to I've heard setting clocks to different times can trick you into getting places at a better time. I plan on continuing to do research in order to learn techniques on being able to time manage much better, and prevent procrastination.

Happy New Year! :)

Knight_Riderz - January 1, 2016, 9:44 pm

Well , If the was new year resolution of 2015 which i haven't achieved yet but its time , I will top the boards as I've been studying my ass off last year and this is the chance , My exam starts from March 1 . I haven't planned anything else yet but i'll spend more time on stocks as i'll be 18 this year and will have my own demat account , I've been practicing on my brothers account previous year so I've gained a lot of experience

Cost - January 1, 2016, 11:25 pm

Well last year was great as it was more of my "learning" period I guess you can say. This year I have a few things in mind that I want to accomplish and I would like to start that off by going to weights. I have already been going to weights for the past 3 weeks, and this year I want it to continue for months and if not years as I think maintaining a healthy lifestyle is very important. Second, I would like to help my family out financially and wouldn't mind working hard in order to get us to go on a family vacation since its been years since we have last went on one and doing this would really relive the stress in all of us. Third thing I would like to do is finally buy all of the parts to my pc to finally build it. My pc is 6 years old and the whole computer alone is worth $130, I'm still surprised it can even run still as it gets 100% cpu usage even when idle lol. I also want to learn how to make music and I have already signed up for courses in my school in order to do this as I really find it interesting. Lastly, my goal is also to complete my AOF course in order to hopefully get a job at a Fortune 500 company and to run a business with my dad and or start cpa and or my ebay business in order to have some extra income on the side. Thanks once again for this giveaway!

Davin Weston - January 2, 2016, 7:20 pm

This Year Onward I have working very hard. I am currently learning AutoIT to make beautiful stuffs. And giving the studies great importance along with HF . Last year I could not do it well because I became ill and was in complete bed rest for many months. And I was just felt alone to complete my works.

For this my 2016 New Years resolution I will do more work in which I could not succeed in 2015. Although it is very tough to do it. But I am confident that my hard work and practice will make me succeed in the resolution for 2016 for which I am struggling and will continues to struggle till I really succeed into it.

This 2016 is really a very good start which will help me and also the other members to reach their dreams. Which is for sure that It will come and make me happy and cheerful and also others.

Just all needed to do is struggle till I win over it I as I know its going to very hard work in 2016 and there are other stuffs to in which I have to give my 100% to make the victory and will achieve my goal. I will have to work on my work with full devotions. to make dreams come true.

Aurora - January 3, 2016, 9:23 am

I'm really looking forward to this new year. I like the idea of a "fresh start". Everything that had happened last year is now in the past. It's a new year, new things will happen, and it's a chance for you to take action and do something about it. One of my flaws tends to be procrastination. I always find a way to avoid doing this and that. It amuses me how I put so much effort into avoid doing things that if I put that same effort into doing the work, I would have been finished with it already. With that being said, I plan on getting a lot of work done this year. It's always easier said than done. That's why I like to have some motivation. I like to think about where I COULD be in my life right now if I actually did all the work I was suppose to do. It motivates me to get up in the morning, go through my daily routine, and get to work. The only reason why people get discouraged from everyday work is because they see no progress. It's the little things that you do everyday that counts. All you really need to achieve your goal is dedication and patience.

Here's one of my favorite videos when I need motivation to keep on working:

[Video: https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=26U_seo0a1g]

I think of it like this. Work now, enjoy later. It's always difficult for me to keep that mindset, but I've been changing my habits to get more out of my day. I can't work with a "digital to-do list". I need a real notepad for me to jot down my things to do for the day, do them, and then cross them out.

I actually took one step further and started my resolution a week ago. I've been going strong for a week and a day now, and I can definitely say I've seen improvement and progress. That's pretty much what you need to see to keep on going. You won't hit your goal overnight, but the little things you do will help you reach it.

Thanks for taking the time to read this. Good luck to everyone.

Quinn. - January 3, 2016, 9:41 am

Improve my overall wellbeing; smoking less tobacco, eating less junkfood, start working out and training for the marathon for this year. Get promoted at work again (managed to do this last year). Learn Python, C# and ASP. Remove all the bad people from my personal life and be civil with the ones I can't get rid of.

Also wish to lower the amount of smoking bud and drinking spirits as I need to be a bit more aware. Will be learning to drive this year as well which is also very good. 2014 was practice. 2015 was a warm up and 2016 is the real deal.

I know this probably isn't the best or biggest goals but it's honest and is going to play a massive improve on my quality of life, well being as well as the others who are close to me.

~Thanks for contest.

Black???????????????? - January 3, 2016, 12:43 pm

I've been talking to this girl for about 3 months now and never had the courage to go and ask her out, whether it was because I was simply scared of being rejected or unhappy with the way I look I'm not sure but I plan on changing both. I've already enrolled in crossfit with a few friends of mine (Monday, Wednesday and Fridays) so that I can look better and feel more confident. Hopefully this will be just what I need to get the courage to go up to her and ask her out. If I get rejected, hey, I can't say that I didn't try and the fact that I lost weight should dampen the pang from rejection.

Regardless of whether I win this or not, it feels good to tell someone about my goals.
Good luck everyone and I hope you are able to carry out your New Year Resolutions ?

Sakuto - January 3, 2016, 1:19 pm

This year I'll start again body-building and try to do my best even if I have my left arm paralyzed. I will also start again my blog (<http://handicapable.be> my blog in French where I tell about how I'm doing the everyday work / life even if I'm disabled) to help people to understand what it's really to be disabled in a daily routine. I'll also finally find people to make the same and write article on my blog about how they live. My final goal is to change my blog on a big encyclopedia of tips to have a better life / easier life even if you're disabled, and even if you feel depressed or just want to give up.

I really want to help people to live happy, even if they recently lost an arm, a leg or something like this. If I was okay with it and I accepted it, I'm pretty sure I'll be able to help people to accept it too. And I think it's a pretty good resolution, and not only a resolution, it's just a prevision, because I already started it 6 months ago, and I'll continue. And I'm sure it will be helpful.

Thanks for your read guys, your contest is very good and different.

Sharjah - January 3, 2016, 1:22 pm

What I'm hoping to do in 2016 is to eat right. I've been hitting the gym daily since early 2015, and I've noticed quite the bit of progression, however, my diet was absolute shit. I told myself, for the month of January, I will eat healthy, in hopes that afterwards, I will be motivated to continue eating healthy, which will help with my diet. I started training without any personal trainers, no help, nothing, and I've seen nothing but progression, however, my eating habit is horrible. Eating right may seem like a lame new years resolution, but it seems like I really need to get into the habit of eating right, which is what I'm hoping to achieve this year.

Thanks for making this thread by the way. I am able to express myself and it motivates me more.
Haha, good luck to everyone

Hellblazer? - January 3, 2016, 1:26 pm

I dont usually do new year resolutions because you dont wanna not achieve it and then youve failed lol.

But if anything I would say to try and get a full time job. I left college in June 2013 and could not get any jobs, my area there is alot of homelessness and I only just managed to find a part time job in November(10 hours a week evenings till 11:30pm) I live about an hour away from it so I want to get a full time job by the end of 2016 and hopefully its somewhere closer+socialable hours. Honestly I wouldnt care as long as I get a full time job.

Thanks for the giveaway though.

Like each and every person, I have goals too. But my goals are not that big. I don't plan to become better than anyone, I just want to improve so I can feel better with myself. And to improve I will need the following:

1. Learn to code (I've learned enough in 2015, I just want to continue learning the same way this year), so I'm more prepared for university.
2. Finish high school without problems (give my exams and projects, I'll try my best).
3. Become a better person to others.
4. Continue going to gym to keep my self-esteem in check, also stay healthy.
5. Hang out with people who want to prosper in life.
6. Close my mouth and open my ears.
7. Try to not be dependent on other people. (Keep it to the minimum).

These are my goals. Good luck to everyone.

w?????illiam???? - January 4, 2016, 12:36 pm

In 2016 I am going to strive to accomplish more with the time that I am given. By this, I mean spend my time more wisely. I need to do a better job with managing my time because at the moment I either do a certain thing too much, or don't do a certain thing enough. I also need to work on remembering to do things, what I mean by this is to remember to turn in school assignments on time.

GeoffDoesNotWearHats - January 4, 2016, 12:43 pm

I've set two big goals for myself in 2016:

Firstly, I want to gain weight and live a healthier life. For a couple of years now, an unhealthy lifestyle of stress and illnesses have definitely not done anything good for my body. I've already started eating healthier food and working out every evening. My second goal is to write at least one blog post every week to have a regular deadline, which helps me to stick to other deadlines better as well.

Sw?er?ve - January 4, 2016, 1:33 pm

I want to be able to maintain and grow my project and hopefully make some nice money with it, I've been lacking in that regards so my life for the next year will be Sleep, Revise for exams, business. I prolly won't get anything since I didn't write some long ass paragraph but gl to everyone

Incognito™ - January 4, 2016, 5:01 pm

As a kid I always had a problem watching my weight, the past year I already lost over 35 pounds just from watching what I consume. This year it is also my goal to keep myself in a more active lifestyle and watch what I do because it not only makes me happy but makes my parents happy. They never seen me so active and because of that they started getting active. My mother and I are starting our 3rd 6 week ab training course and I'm hoping by summer I'll finally have the courage to take off my shirt and rock what I look like. I know this is a lot of peoples new years resolution but I made it through 2015 and I'm hoping 2016 will be even better. I'm assuming the whole "Watching my weight" cliché is counted as a legitimate new years resolution.

Thank you red lions for the awesome give away and hope that everyone does something to change themselves this year.

Freerunning - January 4, 2016, 9:38 pm

This year 2016 my goals are

1. Grow my startup website funfactlol.
2. Learn electronics where I can build simple machines like automated locks.
3. Enhance more my knowledge about Information Security.
4. Learn mobile app programming.
5. Expand the network of my Homework Services to other forum not just here in Hackforums.
6. Find a niche and able to monetize it to get a decent income. I'm independent so I'm paying for my bills and house rent which is pretty hard when you are living in a 3rd world country.
7. To get out of my comfort zone in Parkour/Freerunning. Last year was a bad year for my career where I get dislocated elbow and broken ankle it is pretty hard to get over the fear after a painful injury.
8. Have a good celebration for my birthday this coming January 16. I didn't have a chance to celebrate birthday, christmas and new year for the past few years because of work and I need to work hard to live.

Thank you so much Red Lions for hosting this contest.

My resolution for the new year, is to finally quit smoking. I've been smoking for about 6 years now, and I'm really starting to feel the affects of it. I've been wanting to quit permanently for a while now, I've tried a few times but I could never really seem to kick it. This time I'm putting all of my effort into it, I'm cutting my smoking down, I can't go cold turkey or I'd literally lose my mind.. The slow cutting down is helping a lot considering I used to smoke a pack and a half a day.

not sure if you're allowing us to pick what we'd prefer, but if we are allowed, I'd take either the $100 or the gift award.

Good luck to everyone else who takes part.

I'm just going to be short and straight to the point with my entry here. I'm looking forward for some initial investment money to begin back with my online earning. Anything I win will help me. I can sell the steam gifts to get some money and put em in you know. So yeah that's pretty much it. Happy new year 2016 to the Redlions group members. Hope you had a great holidays.

My New Years resolution is something I would rather not share on a online forum.

But best of luck to everyone that enters this.

My new years resolution would be to find a job, yes very basic but just coming out of college I've found it extremely difficult to find a job. I need to try harder because right now it's just putting me into a depressive stage of being indoors and just browsing HF..

Thank you for hosting the giveaway. ?

N1nj4Styl3 - January 5, 2016, 12:06 pm

Hello,

To be honest, 2016 won't be any different than 2015 for me as I always tried to striven in for the best possible that someone could get. Specifically, for this year at least (and many more to come of course) I would like to spend a quite good time in my studies as my element is quite hard to succeed in and I should really try a little more than previously.. and of course get the best outcome of my life as a university student and enjoy it the best possible. (Cinemas, walks, friends, movies, fun in general). Other than the studying part which takes a lot of time of my life, I would also like to spend more time with my girlfriend as we really into each other and like the same activities/actions (food, movies, walk outs, etc). These 2 things currently are the most important to me.. and then I would like to start searching for a job so I can fulfill my summertime, one of my "future" (since I can't really decide/know when it's going to happen) is to buy my first car since recently I got my driver's license.

Oh, and maybe get some joy to clean my room more often.. as currently living alone is boring.. therefore; I clean it once a week.. hehe. That's all about me to be honest.

Hoping to get $100 BTC in case I win, would be useful for my future goals.

Thank you for this contest, generous of you all. ?

Ganja - January 5, 2016, 1:31 pm

So, my goal for 2016...

One goal I set for 2016 is to do DMT, but that's not really an achievement. It does however fit in with my main goal; living my life the way I want to. I do have a lot of good friends, a great family and a very hot girlfriend but I don't like the way society forces me to live. I've always (kind of) followed the main 'road' of life: going to school, getting good grades, building a great CV, earning some money. But I want real freedom; not being bound to go to work on monday, not being bound to live in only 1 country. I do want to work, but in a way that makes me happy.

I don't have the income to live like that yet- but I'm working on it. I'm busy starting several businesses that I basicly just need a laptop for to run (after a year or so). My goal is to achieve real 'freedom' by the start of 2017.

Last year was really hard for me through Many personal things, Hoping this year things change and personal things get better. I'd like emerald award please.

Louis C.K. - January 5, 2016, 6:44 pm

My new year resolution would to make more money. Whether I achieve this goal online or a real job, I am trying to make enough money this year so I can buy a car for myself. I am currently in school and take commute transit which can be headache at times, if I had a car the trip to school would be way faster.

I wanna get control of my life. I am currently in a deep hole. I wanna move back to Denmark within a few weeks, and start doing some easy money making on the internet, so I can start on my biggest passion again: computer games. I wanna get back to challenger in League of Legends, and aim to be a professional, as it's always been a huge dream. I threw away the chance once, but this time it's gonna be different.

Hey guys,

I am at a fairly pivotal point in my life right now. For the next year I am going to be trying to reel everything back in. I just turned 27 years old (weird), I am 6 credit hours from having my associates degree in Computer Science, I don't have the best job in the world, and I don't have a girlfriend (It's about time to start settling down and having kids, but I'm not going to put a baby in the first thing I see in a skirt. It's been a little stressful.). I have already been working on all of these things for the last few months. I have to take a Java class next semester, so I have spent so much time learning and practicing (as well as my other classes), that I believe that my eyes are going to bleed. I also toned my drinking down to the point that it is pretty much non-existent! Ladies don't really like the alcoholic type. I also stopped smoking. I need to be making a little over $2k a month to be living comfortably on my own, so I have been working on a couple of Websites that I can work on in my spare time that will help me reach that goal. I am just at a crossroads where it is time to get off of my ass and start growing up. We all have to grow up sometime, and as mentioned, I am definitely at that age where I need to pull it together. I will be busting my ass for the rest of the year trying to get everything together and getting the rest of my life set up.

I would like to shoot for that $100 btc if at all possible. Thanks a lot fellas.

I'm setting a goal to stop smoking and become fit and healthy. I first started 2 years ago when I started partying and I've only now really realized how bad it really is. I'm starting to get really unfit and I want to better improve my health. I'm going to start the gym and Muay Thai and overall just be a better person towards everyone.

R2-D2 - January 8, 2016, 2:54 pm

I always have problems with waking up in the morning and getting ready. I decided to set my goal to be way more productive in the morning. Normally I have to use the tube to get from my place to school but now I try take the train (now 50 minutes longer) just to go to Starbucks every morning to get me and my friends a good start in the day. To finance my new drinking habit, I decided to make a lot of money this year. I already started with writing a ebook and other stuff. To be more hq here on hackforums I also want to continue practicing my english (my mother language is german).

Here is just a small list of other things I wanted to do/change:

- quit smoking (done for now)
- stop taking drugs (done for now)
- make 10k (working on it)
- donate 2k (working on it - so far 50ct for a poor child's meal)
- be happier (not done for now)

That's my list/entry. I know it's not the best but maybe you like it.

?MIN?M - January 8, 2016, 2:55 pm for 2016, I want to make this a big improvement year.

- 1.) I've chewed for 10+ years and i'm quitting. (haven't bought any dip since new years)
- 2.) become more socially intelligent. Learn how to read people, persuade, introduce, deal ect. (reading a book)
- 3.) Forgive the grudges.
- 4.) Make $50 online this month, x2 every month after (currently researching)
- 5.) fix my motorcycles. (just brought them all to my house)
- 6.) Make that girl my girl. (I don't dlike being in a relationship, but damn if someone else dates her!!)

Deno - January 8, 2016, 9:19 pm

2016:

I suddenly felt boredom when I woke up on my first morning of the year , for 3-4 years all i do was study, play and watch animes. i went to my computer to think about some things that can change my life and the first thing that came up to my mind was HACKING. For me hacking is like playing a game of chess, i should have a strategy to penetrate the enemy defense. I know that i might went to jail if i go deeper on this but I'm willing to risk it. i have been on a lot of forums in the past few days but this forum got everything i need. i almost spend my days here in HF reading some stuffs but there's an limit because some of the files can be only access by a l33t/ub3r.

I want to read more and learn more!!!!!!!

Truth - January 8, 2016, 9:39 pm

I like to keep my goals simple so I can keep focus on them and most importantly cross the finish line. My New Years Resolution is to learn how to create websites and maybe even create some for fellow HF members. I have already built my first website so I just need to learn a little more then I can give back to HF.

Anyways thanks for the content good luck to everyone and I hope you reach your New Years Resolution! ?

Eminem????? ????? - January 8, 2016, 9:44 pm

This year I need to think more on my future. In 2015 I spent a lot of time going over colleges for med school, and basically filling out a bunch of awards etc that I've earned. Nothing really permanent though. I need to in 2016 focus on my studies more. I need to take the time to go up to local community colleges and take basic ed classes rather than focusing on my major. It'll be a lot easier to get through basic ed at a community level rather than a University level. On top of that I really need a refresher in math. I used calculators for 99% of my math the past few years, and that hasn't helped much with actually learning math. It was the cheap way out, and I'm paying for it now. I'll probably plan on doing that during the summer.

$100 BTC is the prize I'd like to obtain.

Torvus - January 9, 2016, 11:11 am

I do not want prizes, if there are any left.

My goals for this year are pretty tall, but I do have precise plans to achieve all of them. I plan to quit smoking, pay off my house so that I have no more monthly mortgage payment, attend the gym and bust ass an AVERAGE of 4 times a week, and propose to my girlfriend

Actually, in addition to paying off my house, I will finish the basement in to a livable, pleasurable space and repair the crumbling foundation so that the house isn't a pile of trash once I have payed it off. This goal is reasonable because I owe <$15,000 on the house, I live in a cozy little hobbit hole which barely costs anything in utilities, and I have no automobile loan. Car was paid off on last year's, New Years Resolutions.

I am working on being more patient with people in general, but especially in public. Since the 1st, I have been and will continue to work on looking at the big pictures first, instead of immediatly criticizing negligence and obliviousness. I will be considering what distracts people from simply doing the right thing and being considerate of others. I will be proactive at implementing contructive solutions to ignorance. This might not sound much like self-improvement, but my goals for this year revolve around DOING MORE GOOD, whether it's a benefit for myself, or community(s).

Quitting smoking is an interesting one so far. I was on a pack per day through all of last year. My GF and I both quit smoking in late November, but I started back on a half-pack per day very recently and I'm not happy about it, so that will be cut out very soon. The one thing I need to make it happen is comfort though. I need to settle in to a career that I actually enjoy. One that doesn't stress me out. That is probably the best New Years Resolution that I have going on here. That would be the biggest life improvement. Good career, and not just another decent-paying job.

I also plan to attend Hack Forums religiously. As an agnostic, I don't have alot of faith in things we don't know. So I thrive on facts and information. Hack Forums is crammed full of useful things to learn and the more we learn, the more tools we have to use. The brain is the most powerful weapon of all, and the more applications we know for it, the more we can use it in every day life.

I sincerely wish everyone good will on their goals and dreams for this year. I want yours to be acheived just as much as mine.

Happy New Year <3

GreyHatZone - January 9, 2016, 1:32 pm

My new years resolution is too actually go the gym and enjoy myself more often. How I plan on doing this is to try to stop being pessimistic and look at the good things on life, if I were to win this would make me even more optimistic.

Thanks a lot OP :)

BooGod - January 9, 2016, 1:56 pm

I'd like to this year start creating a new private game server, to make money and pay the scamm report on me, because my account was compromised. I want also to make my live a lot easier, it would help in this case and I would donate money to HF's after receiving revenue of the game, the total to start would be no more than $60 so I am entering in the contest for the money prize.

Thank you very much for this contest Red Lions, really appreciate.

Jordana Brewster - January 14, 2016, 8:48 am

I hope I'm not too late.. if I am.. well fuck, but congratulations to the winner!

I've been wanting to sort out my life a bit for a while so I thought of a few things.. and the goal for me is to take them slowly and even small changes can help.

1) Sort my sleep

Spoiler (Click to View)

This might be a joke to some of you but I do have a problem with not sleeping enough. I always think of sleeping as something to escape, something to sacrifice so I can play that one more round of League or watch a film or do that late night homework.

I regret in the morning but after a coffee and some time the feeling goes away.. yet I know that my health is being affected badly by my lack of sleep. I've had maybe an average of 6 hours over the past 4 years, sometimes dropping to just 3-4 and sometimes sleeping 11-12 hours.

I need to work on a mentality that sleep is not something that I can sacrifice in order to do more fun things or catch up on work but rather something precious that I need to spend time doing.

I need to start by stopping leaving my work to the last night, and knowing when it's time to stop playing that video game or stop watching that movie and call it a night.

I've been progressing slowly, avoiding staying up till 1-2am unless it's the weekend.. maybe as the year progresses I can start seeing some sort of normal sleep life.

2) Try give back more

Spoiler (Click to View)

I realize that in day to day life, that I am pretty lucky and well off compared to some other people.

I don't appreciate that I sometimes have everything that I have and I need to start doing that more.

I also need to start giving back to the community more, firstly as a way to improve my CV and future career and also doing something that will benefit someone or a group of people.

I always want to try and be remembered for something, while I know I doubt I will ever get to wear a jersey with a gaming team's logo on it and play in front of the whole world at least I can try my best to do the little things that I remembered by the few rather than the many.

One of the first things towards that is giving blood, which I will be doing in February/March when there is a nearby center open.

And after that helping with a marathon for a second year in my local town.

3) Sort out my relationships

Spoiler (Click to View)

Ever since my ex-gf that was with me for about 3 months broke up (we were both at fault and in the end it was mutually agreed for some many reasons)

I realized that I'm the one who tends to know a lot of girls either online and offline. For example the people I play online games with and those I know in person.

I'm lucky to have a girlfriend that in fact, the whole drama with my ex started about.

I was spending a lot of time playing with her rather than my old ex gf at the time and well, the breakup was mainly because of that.

And she said to me something which really made me think a lot... "How would you feel if I played with someone who fancied me" and I realized, that sometimes I can be an asshole or a jerk who keeps his options open even though I already have someone.

I've been trying to get that changed and show my gf that she is the only girl in my world outside of course family and that I am more than willing to severe relationships with other friends to show her that.

I started by breaking contact with my ex, even though she keeps trying to message me on Facebook saying how she misses me, I've been doing my best to avoid contact, already blocked her on Skype and on a few games that we used to play together.

There's obviously a whole complicated story behind this and the breakup...

but in short for the new year I want to be a trustworthy guy and someone who my gf can trust and always know that I won't leave or cheat on her.

and I would hate to be that kind of guy...

So I guess taking small steps to cut off contact with a few girls and really devote my time and attention to the one girl who loves me rather than being or knowing a lot of girl-friends..

Thank you for the contest Red Lions!

I hope you, and your group have a great new year

4) Learn to read threads

Spoiler (Click to View)

God dammit, I was late for this.

Kuso - January 15, 2016, 12:29 am

Well recently I have been laid off by my full time job. Ever since then, especially now that is a new year as well, I finally figured out what I want to do. I have setup options for me to go back to school in college. I am going to study in business. So far the options are Marketing or management information systems. I am going to do more talking in the schools office to determine the best sub-field. So far I am leaning more towards marketing even though the yearly median is much lower. But all the classes I want to take including the prep for becoming an independent businessman is in that sub-field.

I am also going to attempt to do schooling with a full-time. I have done this before and it worked out well. Only problem was I didn't know what interest me in life after all the things I did in and after school wasn't ever accomplished. So it led to meltdown after two semesters and I left college. So when I have a full-time job while schooling. I will be much more productive person meeting more productive members of society thus making a better circle of people I can surround myself with. Useful, trust worthy, and gearing towards a more progressive life.

Once I have that done my last but not least, I will go on and finish up my side program. I had been in the studies of learning the programming language swift for Apple. However the education came to temporary stop because of the need for a new macbook as the old one actually had trouble compiling some of the bigger programs I was building.

Once I have the business degree in marketing or maybe the other and the programming knowledge will be a nice sub-skill for me to build my own little gig and hopefully become something even greater like a company started out making CoC.

Yes I could android first, however a smarter business idea would be head over to the casual-friendly audience. They tend to spend much more money than on things they actually just need. In-app store purchases are through the roof on Apple all products. Etc.

Till then, those are my biggest goals for this year. Hopefully I when all comes together I can actually start building my own empire to my dreams.

Kosmos - February 18, 2016, 4:25 pm

At the beginning of the year, I decided it was time to grow up. I was two weeks away from graduating high school and I needed to clean my act up. I wasn't into drugs, I just had a poor attitude about life. When I felt emotionally (in a negative way), I would take it out on others. I am sure plenty of you saw this in the past with my old account of the same name. I wouldn't just take it out on others online though. I put my family through hell after my ex-girlfriend left me. I kept blowing them off and putting them down for about a month after, until I met my current girlfriend and mother of my soon to be child (which I've told nobody about until now). I am not giving her all of the credit, but if it weren't for her, I wouldn't be as strong willed as I am today. We have been together for almost 8 months now. Life has been absolutely great and what better than to have a New Years resolution to not only start treating others better, but also myself. I have been too hard on myself in my teens. I'm almost 20 years old. I don't need this negativity in my life, especially if I'm about to be a father. I receive my diploma in June (already finished with all of the work) and I start college in the Fall. I'm about to head out tomorrow afternoon and start the weekly job search as well. This year has been wonderful so far. I hope that everyone is in a similar, positive place for the year. ?

I could tell you all about my college plans, or how im working hard to make youtube channel popular but my biggest goal is to stay smoke free from cigs. Been a smoker for two years but what made me quit is when i woke up one morning, I woke up grabbing my chest while having a hard time to breath (thought i was gonna die to be honest)ever since then ive been off and my goal is to make it to a year cause at that time frame ill be fully healthy im only 20 to young for this shit.

This year I will start my own NGO aiming towards social empowerment. If we grow alone we will just be a tree but when we grow together we can become a forest. I had started with the groundwork, will start to contribute by the end of June. Any kind of help will be much appreciated.

I am at a fairly pivotal point in my life right now. For the next year I am going to be trying to reel everything back in. I just turned 27 years old (weird), I am 6 credit hours from having my associates degree in Computer Science, I don't have the best job in the world, and I don't have a girlfriend (It's about time to start settling down and having kids, but I'm not going to put a baby in the first thing I see in a skirt. It's been a little stressful.). I have already been working on all of these things for the last few months. I have to take a Java class next semester, so I have spent so much time learning and practicing (as well as my other classes), that I believe that my eyes are going to bleed. I also toned my drinking down to the point that it is pretty much non-existent! Ladies don't really like the alcoholic type. I also stopped smoking. I need to be making a little over $2k a month to be living comfortably on my own, so I have been working on a couple of Websites that I can work on in my spare time that will help me reach that goal. I am just at a crossroads where it is time to get off of my ass and start growing up. We all have to grow up sometime, and as mentioned, I am definitely at that age where I need to pull it together. I will be busting my ass for the rest of the year trying to get everything together and getting the rest of my life set up.

I would like to shoot for that $100 btc if at all possible. Thanks a lot fellas.

Vouch for this guy, they've been doing extremely well on their resolution to better themselves and I'm proud of them.

2016 is going to be the year for them.
