Thread: [\[score en shell\] challenge \[help required\]](#)

xermes - January 6, 2016, 10:37 pm

Greetings, I've ran into this challenge hackme website, however, to dont drag the thread for no reason heres some details :

scoreshell.certifiedsecure.org

If you navigate site properly you'll find robots.txt:Code Disallow: /cgi-bin/

Disallow: /log/

So next logical step is to go into Code /log/ (since /cgi-bin/ cant be accessed)

Anyway when you navigate to /log/ you get login form page...?

So i tried to intercept the traffic with proxy, and I got some pretty nice info:

if you examine the resposne i got, I got some information about the system, and bash logs, so I figured using shellshock might work ? . Gosh I was wrong, I tried every single shellshock trough user-agent/refferer/cookie, everything I could've think off.

Thank in advance,

Hack the world,

Xermes

It's clear shellshock won't work, look at the last time the box has been internally updated. It's listed on the uname.

Did you solve it yet?

I've been trying for hours, editing headers, trying to find a shellshock vuln. It doesn't seem like it's shellshock but the challenge just screams netcat shell all-over :|

Let me know, I am anxious to solve this
